A feeling of smallness envelopes you as you first step onto URI soil.

You look around, trying to orientate yourself to this new and seemingly vast environment.

Look over there . . . Chafee Hall, the tallest academic building which towers above the rest; the Quad with people shuffling back and forth to classes, ultimate frisbee games in process and friends socializing with friends; and don't forget the football stadium, where fans range in age from the very young to the old. Students and parents alike cheer on the RAM players to yet another victory. Then of course there is the campus pub where students come to party hard after a tough week of hitting the books.

All of this and more symbolizes life at URI. Yet there are those special moments that only a staff photographer could catch with his roving camera. These are the highlights of college life . . .

The anxiety on the face of a new freshman soon replaced by the confident look of the graduating senior. The not so happy times are replaced by the happy memories taken with us when we depart URI for other pursuits.

A secret smile comes to your face as you remember those many special friendships, the many laughs and those few tears shed as you say farewell to friends at graduation and those crazy, nearly carefree, college days.

your future careers in the classroom, but the life experiences came from the outside social occasions, the diversity of people you are constantly in contact with and from the organizations you belonged to in order to make URI that much more special.

Now, with diploma in one hand, you raise your glass to a toast in the other and say: "The Possibilities Are Endless."

The America's Cup . . . Gone With The Wind

1983 was the year America lost a prized possession that it had held for nearly 125 years. The America's Cup was taken away by the crew of the Australian yacht "Australia II."

The yacht itself was the topic of controversy throughout the trials. The keel, which had wings protruding from its sides, was said to be illegal. After several meetings with the New York Yachting Association, the claims were dismissed and the grand finale between the U.S. yacht "Liberty" and the Aussies yacht "Australia II" was set.

America jumped to a three to one advantage and things were looking good for Captain Dennis Conner and his crew. However, a change from heavy winds to light winds shifted the advantage to the Aussies, due to the fact they had a lighter yacht. Australia sailed to three straight victories, sinking Americas hopes to retain the Cup.

America will have to wait three years to see if she can get back what had been hers so long. This time however, the advantage of home waters are with the Australians, for the race will be held off the coast of Perth.

Politicians Battle It Out

The question people in America are asking nowadays "Who is going to lead the nation for the next four years?"

Well, election time will soon be here and the politicians are busily canvassing the United States trying to drum up support.

Ronald Reagan is campaigning for yet another term in the White House. His charismatic leadership will offer tough competition for the battling Democrats, who are each vying for the party's nomination.

URI journalism students covered first-hand some of the heavy democratic politicing going on in New Hampshire, where the primaries are the first in the nation and the area residents pride themselves on that fact.

The eight major contenders for the Democrat presidential ticket were: Reubin Askew, George McGovern, Fritz Hollings, Alan Cranston, John Glenn, Jesse Jackson, Gary Hart and Walter (Fritz) Mondale.

As the weeks progressed and the primaries moved from state to state, three fighters have emerged from the battleground. Former Vice President in the Carter Administration, Walter Mondale, appears to be the frontrunner. However the "new ideas" candidate, Gary Hart, has been giving Mondale a run for his money. Jesse Jackson has gained tremendous headway in the campaign with his "rainbow coalition." Jackson has remained in the limelight of media coverage as the first Black contender for the highest office in the land. He has also organized a large-scale voter registration drive around the country.

But alas, who will emerge triumphant? Only the polls will tell.

"Trivial Pursuit" The New Campus Craze

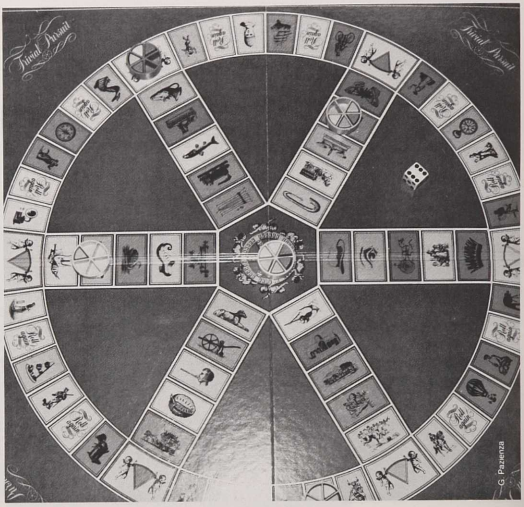

What 1951 film featured Ronald Reagan raising a chimp? What film has Marion Crane stabbed to death in the Bates Motel? What drink is the best thirst quencher?

If you know the answers to these questions you've probably been playing the new board game sweeping the dorms (and the country) — "TRIVAL PURSUIT."

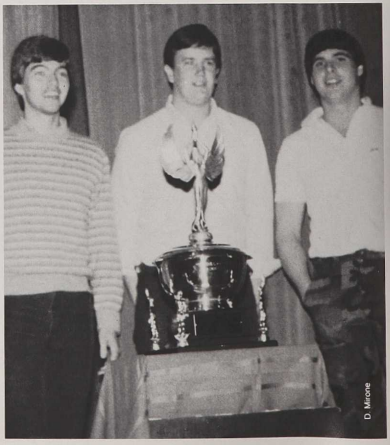

"Trival Pursuit" is a Canadian board game that tests a player's knowledge of trivia. The questions come from the categories of geography, history, science and nature, sports and leisure, and entertainment.

Teams of players compete against each other in answering the wide variety of questions. The object of the game is for the players' game pieces to go around the board, landing on different colored squares (categories).

But you don't have to be a trivia buff to enjoy "Trivial Pursuit." It's a challenging game which forces people to think together and work together. The game has proven to be a favorite for dorm students and dorm staffs alike and is rising in popularity throughout the campus.

The popularity of the game spurred on the idea of a large scale "Trivial Pursuit" tournament. Michael Lapointe and Mark Brady, both Residence Hall coordinators, organized the competitions in the Winter and again in the Spring. Six dorm teams were pitted against each other. The Office of Residential Life was the primary innovator of both tournaments.

Both Lapointe and Brady had organized the semi-final competitons in which 14 dorm teams competed against each other in hopes of making it to the finals.

The final events were held in the Memorial Union Ballroom and came complete with several television screens so the audience could watch the action up close. Throughout the intense games, the audience cheered on their players. Prize drawings were held sporadically to break up the game. Winners won Caserta Pizzas, Casey's dinners for four, and gift certificates. Three faculty judges were also on hand in case of a disagreement over an answer.

D. Mirone

The game is fun, Lapointe said, adding that many of the activities planned in the Residence Halls focus on physical events. "Trivial Pursuit" is like "mental gymnastics and very informational."

"The exciting part for me," said Brady, "is that the game is mentally stimulating."

Both Lapointe and Brady observe that the audience becomes as much absorbed in the game of trivia as do the players. The audience's applause when their winning team got a right answer and the "OHs!" when their players missed the trivia question made this quite evident.

"Trivial Pursuit" is the perfect game for a dorm activity, a party, or anywhere because the energy level of the people involved is, as Lapointe said, "INFECTIOUS!"

PRESIDENT EDDY . . .

T. Mercurio

This year was the start of a new era at the University. It was the beginning of URI's 9th Presidential career here.

Edward D. Eddy came to URI on October 1, 1983, from Pennsylvania State University, where he served as Provost.

He replaced former President Frank Newman, who left URI to join the Carnegie Foundation.

Eddy, 62, was selected from a field of 200 applicants in a six-month search.

Eddy's love of education and impressive background have helped him to ease into his first year at URI.

He is the premier authority on the land-grant college system in America, under which URI was built. Eddy wrote a book entitled, "Colleges for Our Land and Time," the only complete history of this country's land-grant universities.

Eddy is also the recipient of seven honorary degrees and has received the National Brotherhood Award for the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Eddy earned his bachelor and Ph.D degrees in humanities disciplines at Cornell, and took a masters divinity at Yale.

A New Era Begins

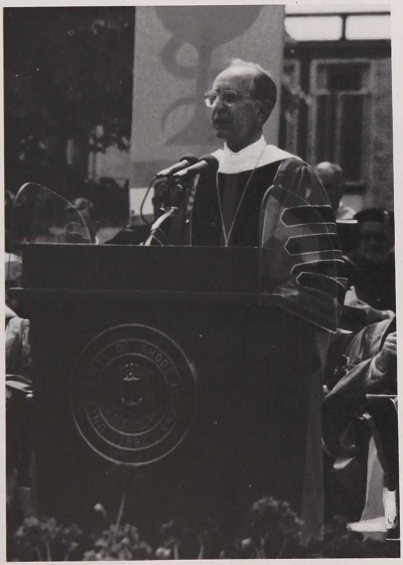

Here at URI, he has outlined five priorities which he has continuously stressed. These include bringing about a greater public recognition of the uniqueness of URI; the development of a budget strategy which will help recognize our potential; a thorough review of URI's dropping enrollment and retention rate; the cultivation of relations with alumni and friends, both politically and financially; and a continuation to strive toward genuine excellence in all that we do.

Eddy called his first semester here "exciting," and said that 1984's biggest challenge will be to set in motion and continue a sense of momentum that the University is really on its way toward a "genuine jump in quality."

Eddy believes URI underestimates itself, and hopes his positive tone and love for the University will help spread the word of URI and its resources.

Anatomy of a Journalism Major

DRESS: Rumpled sweatshirt, blue Jeans with small notepad in back pocket, Bogart-type hat, tape recorder packed in jacket pocket, camera hanging around neck, port-a-pack harnessed on back, newspaper in hand, dark glasses complete the outfit so potential interviewees don't recognize the J-major.

HANGOUTS: The Good 5¢ Cigar, The Great Swamp Gazette, Renaissance, WRIU, SVC or the Journalism office. (If they aren't here they may possibly be in class.)

HABITS: Always late to class because of late night deadlines, frequent headaches due to VDT (Visual Display Terminal) eyestrain, avid reader of The Providence Journal and Newsweek magazine (because of Journalism assignments) , and viewer of at least three news shows per day.

WORKING ENVIRONMENT: Offices cluttered with newspapers, books, crumpled papers, half-empty cups of coffee and ashtrays filled with cigarette butts.

EXPRESSIONS: "My whole copy was erased by this@#$* VDT!", "Who's doing layouts?", "Did the copy go to press?", "What do you mean there's no footage?", "My tape ran out and I lost the best part of the Senate meeting!"

Perfect Places to Study?

If you are on the URI campus with the intention of studying, you have no excuse for not doing so. If you look hard enough, you are bound to find a study spot made exclusively for you. Here is just a sampling of the popular places to study on campus.

The infamous University Library is the place for the "serious studier." You probably went there many times with high hopes of leaving within the hour, but never actually seeing the light of day again. Finals are always a fun time at the library. You get there at 8:30 in the morning all psyched to study, and end up studying on the stairs. Such is the life of the "serious studiers."

The commuter lounge is another place you might try to study. But there are three words which have often curbed people's studying habits in the commuter lounge: BIG SCREEN T.V. Need I say more?

The Ram's Den is the ideal studying spot for those students who love to eat while studying. People claim they go there to study, but everyone knows their true intentions are gossiping with friends, of course. All in all, an excellent place to avoid studying.

After failing miserably in the Ram's Den, students often escape to the Browsing Room. A perfect place to study (on the surface anyway.) It is quiet and comfortable. But comfort is the main problem. After sitting on the soft cushions for a few minutes, students end up catching a few winks of sleep.

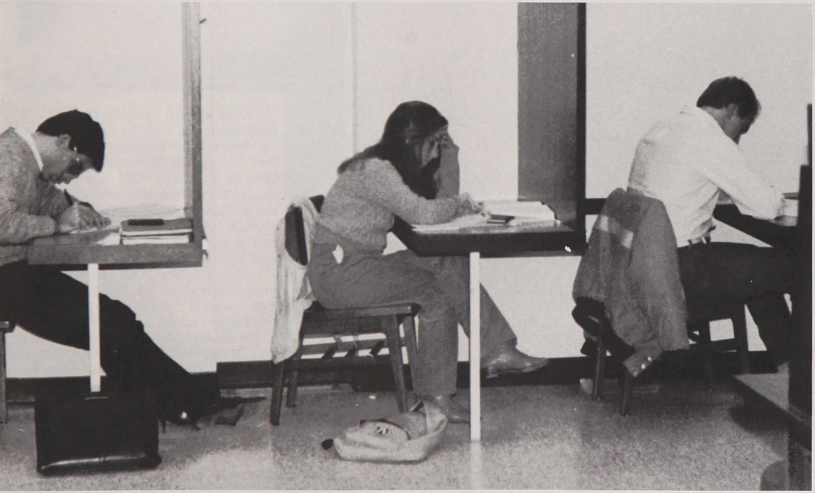

So you see, studying can be a problem at URI. All spots have their advantages, but these advantages are not necessarily academic. As in the case with most students, you probably end up back where you started from — YOUR OWN ROOM!

Food for Thought

Food, Glorious Food . . . A very serious and fulfilling pursuit of college students is that of food. This is an activity that every student can sink his or her teeth into. In four years one can experience all the different tastes and styles that URI and Rhode Island have to offer.

Of course there are many factors which will determine the choice such as: time, budget, current cravings, atmosphere, and mobility. To begin with, there are the three dining halls (we can't forget these). Roger Williams and Butterfield serve the standard daily fare, and Hope Hall has the specialty dinners ranging from roast beef to the ever popular breakfast night.

There is always the chance that your dorm will be having one of the notorious Fall or Spring cook-outs. Everything seems to taste better on a grill, even those hamburgers and hot dogs. Besides the excitement of the food, these cook-outs provide an opportunity to enjoy a few games of volleyball, croquet, frisbee, and a chance to enjoy being outside and socializing.

If you are really lucky, your dorm may have a clambake. Somebody could volunteer a special (and secret) recipe for clam chowder, and no doubt the smell of steamers and corn will draw college students for miles. Even those people new to The Ocean State learn to appreciate clambakes and the abundance of seafood.

Specialty dinners are another favorite activity. These can revolve around countless numbers of themes, many with an international flavor, or they may be a simple potluck dinner. The potluck dinner allows everyone to be involved and to try out their cooking skills, as well as trying out their eating skills when everything is ready. Even if you are not Betty Crocker it's still fun to create a concoction of your own.

If there are still rumbling stomachs to be quieted, you might try Kingston Pizza, Del Mor's, The Cuproom, The Ram's Den, The Coffee Bake and Caserta's on campus. If you have the time and mobility to go off campus, then you can spend many happy hours sampling Rhode Island's culinary delight. It's guaranteed that you will find something to satisfy even the most selective eaters.

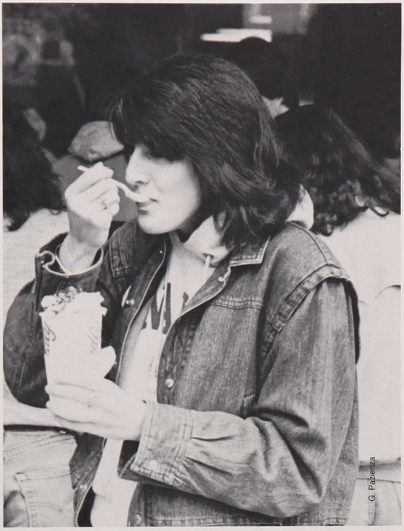

If it is true that man cannot live by bread alone, then it is also true that college students cannot live by pizza and hamburgers alone . . . or can they?

The variety of food choices on campus and off campus are so extensive that we can safely say — The Possibilities Are Endless!

College Professors — Making the Grade?

A. Aaron

G. Pazienza

G. Pazienza

G. Pazienza

Learning is a funny thing.

It is funny in that a major aspect of the experience is drawn from the individual teacher. Students at the university find that there are a variety of teachers with their own unique methods of instructing to pick and choose from.

Mr. Con D. Cending is one type of professor. He may appear passive and subdued outside of class, however his true colors are illustrated in the classroom setting. Mr. Cending is the type who takes immeasurable pleasure in terrorizing (and tyrannizing) students.

The transformation he undergoes can be likened to that of the fictional character, Dr. Jeckyl/Mr. Hyde. Yes, when the transformation occurs, Mr. Cending's mere presence in a 100-yard radius causes students to quiver in fear.

Mr. Cending talks "at" students, often punctuating his lecture content with his own opinions (which he expects to be taken as undisputable fact). This Great Communicator of personal knowledge will overwhelm and humiliate any student who dares to ask a "dumb" question.

Ima Relic (Ms. Relic as she prefers) is another type of teacher. She is not ferocious as Professor Cending — mainly because she lost her bite quite some years before.

Ms. Relic is a teacher who is well beyond the age of retirement. She's the person who never leaves her classroom because in the back of her mind is a fear of being sent away to the "Old Teacher's Home."

Unfortunately for the students in this situation, the class material is as outdated as Ms. Relic herself. She tends to teach the same old tired curriculums year after year after year . . . zzzz.

You'd almost think she would know her lectures by heart. However memory lapses force Ms. Relic to refer to the yellowed pages of notes she has faithfully carried around for years.

Although the curricula are the same, class lectures often stray off into unforeseen directions. Talk of the grandchildren or The Great War usually pop up. Other times she tends to doze off in mid-sentence. A quick shake of her arm or the dropping of a book is almost guaranteed to bring Professor Relic around.

This brings me to the type of teacher that never needs a shake. Dr. Noah All is a variety of professor who views solitary research work as one of life's single greatest pleasures. He is quite brilliant in his field, however he lacks the ability to communicate on the level which students can understand. As a matter of fact, teaching a group of college-aged pupils is seen as quite a bore by Dr. All. He much prefers talking to other Ph.d's rather than to the lower-echelon students, which is no well-kept secret.

Dr. All is the sort who struts into class at the precise starting time, lectures from precise notes and struts out of class at the precise ending time. Office hours are limited. However if a stray student happens to catch Dr. All out of class, he or she will quickly regret it. Why? Because the student will have probably interrupted the instructor's research work.

On the other side of the coin, are the teachers like M. T. Heded. She is frequently late to class and virtually never prepared. Homework assignments are sparse and rarely collected. Class sessions are generally cut short due to Ms. Heded's lack of adequate material.

The style of instructing is very laid back and relaxed, so relaxed that neither the teacher nor the students care much about what is going on in the classroom (by the way these classes are perfect for catching a few winks of sleep).

The general appearance of Ms. Heded is disheveled. Clothing is rumpled and coffee-stained. Notebooks have papers all askew. Ms. Heded's class notes on the blackboard appear similar to the scrawlings of a two-year-old playing for the first time with crayons.

This disorganized professorial type often loses her train of thought in mid-stream. Making appointments to see Ms. Heded is useless since she tends to be absentminded, so much so that she never does learn the names of the 15 students in her class. Often the students are recognized in class lectures as "Hey you!" or "You in the red-striped shirt."

Ms. Heded brings me to my final professorial type. Unfortunately these men and women do not go by a given name because they are so rare to find on a college campus. These instructors are dedicated to their professions and strive to make class discussions enlightening and interesting. Their personalities are dynamic and outgoing. One of the best aspects of class time is that students' views are respected and encouraged in class. Students are also strongly encouraged to seek help after class hours if they need to. This type of teacher makes class lecture exciting and current, but unfortunatley there are only a few of this type around.

Homecoming Extravaganza

The Trials and Tribulations of RESIDENT ASSISTANTS

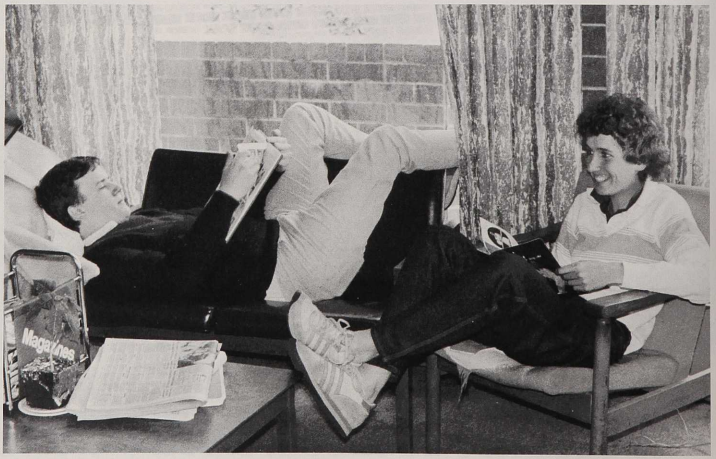

They're known as party poopers . . . narcs . . . and downright pains in the butt. They're treated like aliens (or worse yet, police officers!), and are not supposed to have social lives or problems of their own. They're often disrespected, verbally harassed, and misunderstood by ignorant peers. But when those same peers need something . . . KNOCK, KNOCK, KNOCK!

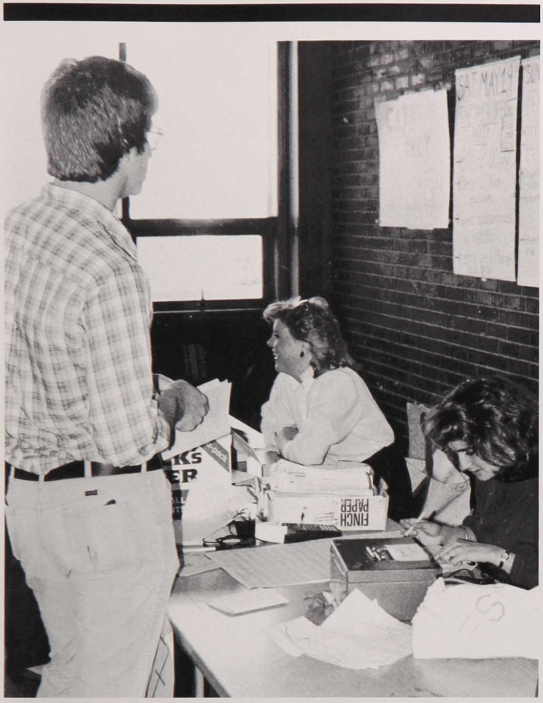

It's the Resident Assistant's door they pound on.

A Resident Assistant is more than simply a hall babysitter. That's part of it. But certianly more goes into an RA's job of organizing and supervising a 250-residence hall than most people realize. RAs work with the Residence Hall Coordinator (RHC) to assure a safe and comfortable living environment for students.

They're the ones who sort the mail, fill the soda machine, make the posters, and run the dorm social and educational programs. They're the ones who stay in (even on Thursday nights!) in case someone has a problem or needs a helping hand. They're the ones who advise or comfort the homesick freshman, provide direction and sincerity to sophomores, lead an empathetic ear to juniors, and share an understanding smile with seniors. They're the ones who people can conveniently turn to . . . for just about anything.

RAs are human too. They have feelings, faults, uncertainties, and problems just like everyone else. They don't always have all the answers, and they're not perfect. But they do try to help people. That's their job.

A Resident Assistant must assume several different roles at once — friend, counselor, social director, resource aid, speaker, listener, administrator, leader, planner, organizer, and student. It's not an easy task. But for those of us who have ever had the pleasure of being cursed at by drunken rowdies . . . or survived Thursday, Friday, or Saturday night on-call . . . we can appreciate the responsibilities and challenges of being a Resident Assistant. And for those of us who have also given new hope to a suicidal student . . . or provided security to a frustrated freshman . . . or succeeded in prompting an entire floor to participate in a dorm function . . . or received a simple "thank you" from a departing dorm resident . . . we can appreciate the intrinsic rewards and satisfaction that that same RA job can bring.

Being a Resident Assistant isn't always easy or fun (and living next-door to one may not be either!). But URI residence halls couldn't last without them. And URI residents . . . KNOCK, KNOCK, KNOCK . . . couldn't either.

SPRING BREAK — Feel the Warmth

Just when the winter blues hit you and the homework starts to pile up, dreams of a tropical vacation creep into your mind. Yes, it's Spring Break time again. Pack up your swimsuits, shorts and tanning oil and head to Florida — college spring break capital of the world.

Your first day there and the breeze is gently blowing through the palm trees as you slowly sip that cool, refreshing strawberry daiquiri. You stretch out in your lounge chair, while you dangle one foot into the water of the swimming pool.

It feels great to leave the East Coast with its minus 10 degree weather and blustering snowstorms. What a change of pace it is in Florida-80 degree weather and not a care in the world. You reflect back to your last great decision: scrambling to book a flight out of Rhode Island, while some of your friends decided to just pack up the car and drive down.

Now the hardest decision you face is which beach to head to first. Of course there are plenty to choose from. All of them have the pearly-white sands and turquoise-blue waters.

So you drive your car to Daytona Beach. The surf is high and there is plenty of traffic right on the beach. The sand has been turned into a freeway as you see dunebuggies race down the stretch of sand. So like everyone else, you steer your car onto the sand and drive along the coast until you find a place to park.

Or maybe you decide to spend an afternoon at one of the quieter and less congested beaches. Palm Beach and Cocao Beach offer some solitude and a gently rolling surf.

But like most college students out for a good time, you spend several days in Fort Lauderdale. The area is filled with students from across the United States with the same thing on their minds — FUN!

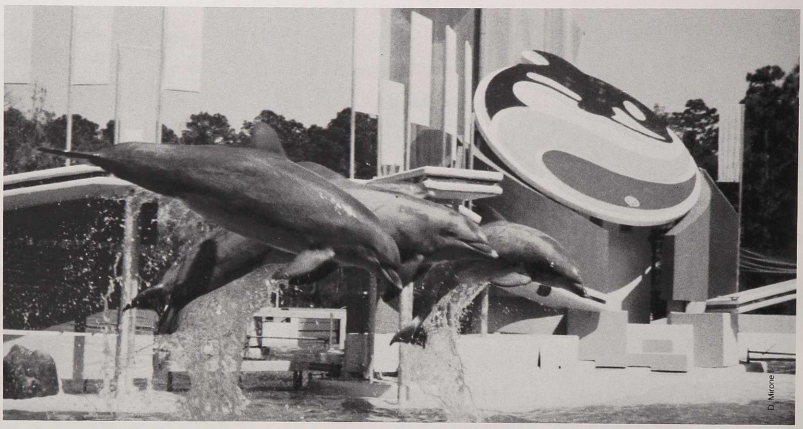

Along the strip are the overly-crowded watering holes. Each of them boasts of drink specials and live bands or other activities. There's Penrods and The Button with the long lines of thirsty people waiting for some room at the bar. The sidewalks are packed with people socializing and shopping. The nightlife looks to be promising: more drink specials, college night parties, wet T-shirt contests and a Belly-Flop competition!

Because you decide to cash in on some more adventure, you take a drive to the biggest playground in the country — Disney World. With all of the rides, games and feature attractions you could spend the entire week here just exploring. Seaworld is right next door and so is Epcot Center. There are all sorts of seal shows and whale and dolphin tricks. But look out for those alligators . . . you just never know when one might crawl up to you on the beach someday.

Unfortunately, the fun comes to an end. You swear that this was the quickest week of the whole year. The next thing you know, you are pulling on your heavy, winter parka and snowboots.

Excitement Begins at ROSECLIFF

G. Pazienza

G. Pazienza

G. Pazienza

We arrived at the front door in a chauffer driven Volvo. This Newport estate, a moderately sized "summer cottage" was jammed with couples. The "Evening of Elegance" and festivities being given by the Weekenders.

As we walked to the door, I noticed the name, ROSECLIFF, engraved on a gold-antique plate in a white-stone block. In a moment of contradiction, I stopped thinking the invitation was from Mr. and Mrs. Weekender not Mr. and Mrs. Rosecliff.

I turned to the doorman and inquired, "Is this the home of Mr. and Mrs. Weekender?"

He grunted, snatched my hat and coat and shut the door behind me.

I found myself in a small but elegantly decorated atrium, listening to the echo of shoes on the marble floor. My attention was diverted for the moment by a rapid flash of light in the distance. The main attraction — an enormous velvet red-carpeted staircase spiraling to the left and right outlining the shape of a heart. Couples gathered, posing to have their pictures taken by the photographers below.

I was then swept into a majestic ballroom. I found myself among 275 of the wealthiest socialites from the URI community. Mingling among these debutants was the wealthiest couple of them all — President Eddy and his wife Polly.

White table clothes with bou quets of long-stemmed roses adorned the room, while couples whirled across the floor to the ballads played by the world-renowned 'Shittons.' Many other remaining stationary were served hors'd'oeuvres and punch.

When midnight rolled around, the dimly lit lights and the ballroom disappeared and I found myself back at the wheel in a beat-up blue volvo wagon.

Don't RAIN On My Parade

It's a Monday morning, and you're waking up after a great sleep. You had a fantastic weekend, and the last thing you want to do is raise your head from the pillows. But, after pressing the snooze button on your alarm five times, you finally get up. You overcome your early morning doubts, and resolve to have a good day. You take a nice hot shower, put on your nicest jeans, and make the long trip to the door. When you finally get there, you look out the window, and your worst nightmares are realized. It's raining at URI! Your mood ruined, you venture outside and head for class. Of course, your class is at Fine Arts, and you have to walk across the quad. Walking across the Quad in a rainstorm takes skill and daring. You better have knee-high boots on, or your favorite pair of white Pony's will soon be a nice shade of brown.

But that's the beauty of URI during a rainy day: muck and mire at its finest. After experiencing this phenomenon once, we all learned to stay in bed, and press that snooze button one more time.

MAYBE TOMORROW . . .

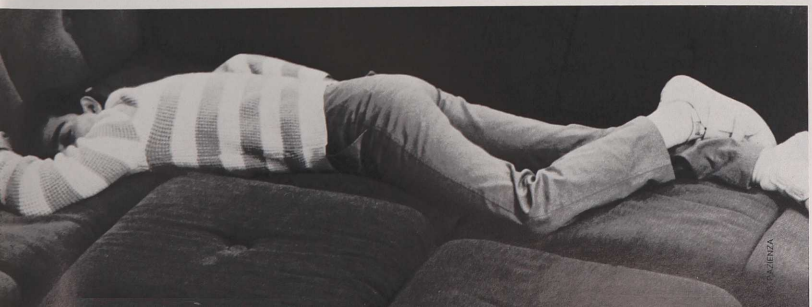

It's very difficult for me to write this story. I have an urge to do something else — Anything else!

But everybody procrastinates. Some just do it better than others. I think I do it better than most. I'd tell you about it but I do not want to do it now.

To tell you the truth, the only reason I'm starting to write this is because I have a paper due tomorrow, and my book is on the other side of the room. That would mean getting up, going to the other side of the room, coming back, and getting re-settled.

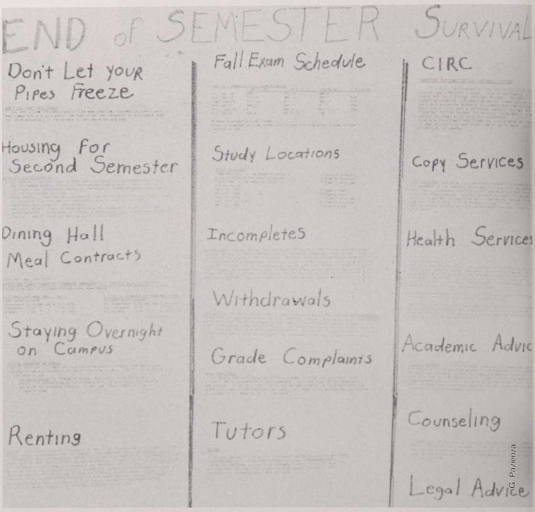

I'll be back in a minute, I've got to get a drink in the Ram's Den. . . . Anyway, where was I? Oh forget it, someone will probably do this story next year. I don't have the time right now.

FINAL EXAMS . . .

Final Exams: These two apparently harmless words instill a feeling of dread in each of us, for one reason or another. As freshmen, we all suffer from a severe attack of tunnel vision. We've heard all the rumors about pulling "all-nighters" and filling up blue book after blue book, but the week itself wasn't as we expected . . . It was worse. But only because we made it worse by our wild imaginations. Instead of studying as we normally did, we spent more hours with our G.P.A.'s. We now know that we were wasting our time, since what we figured out and actually received were two totally different things.

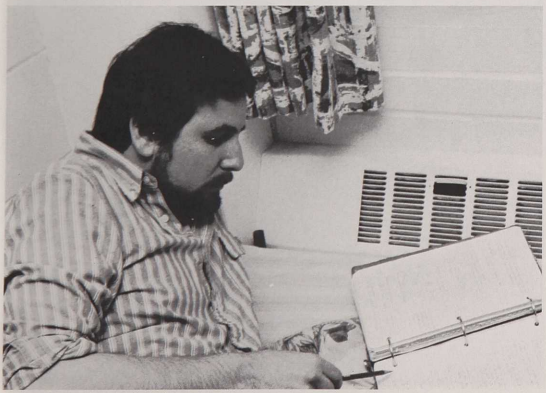

The Agony and the Ecstacy

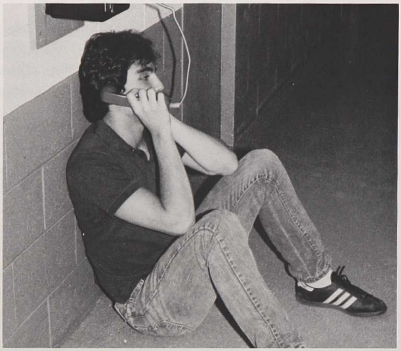

When our second year rolled around, we came back confident and secure. After all, we were sophomores, and we knew everything there was to know. But when finals finally arrived, we were snapped back into reality. After a week of cramming and numerous cups of coffee we knew we still had to come up with reasons explaining how a 2.0 really isn't that bad.

In our junior year, we began to look at exams from a new perspective. We spent all semester studying hard and living from test to test, until finals finally descended upon us. By this stage in our careers, final exams only served as an obstacle in delaying our Christmas break and the annual ski trip up North.

And now it's our senior year. By now, finals are just a drop in the bucket. What with senior portraits, preparing resumes, and numerous job interviews, there's hardly any time to worry about finals. You just take them as scheduled and hope for the best. The funny thing is, you find yourself doing better than ever, and not knowing why. But after all the anxiety involved with freshman and sophomore years, you realize it's just one of the benefits of being a senior. So enjoy it, and good luck. Oh, gotta run now. We have finals in ten minutes and we haven't started studying yet.

Friends, Fun, Good Times and Memories

I remember my first day on campus. Lugging my trunk to the second floor of the dorm. Standing in front of the door to my room, I turned the handle slowly in anticipation.

I remember gently pushing open the door and panning the room from wall to wall . . . pale yellow cinderblock walls, a bare grey tiled floor, an empty desk and a bare bed. So this was my new home. I turned to Mom and Dad with a look of gloom printed on my face. They quickly reassured me that by the time I unpacked all my worldly possessions, the room would gain some life.

I remember not believing a word they said. But after I tacked up some posters on the walls and put down the carpeting, the room miraculously transformed into a place that didn't look quite so terrible.

. . . Now I look back for the last time upon my years spent in that dorm room and the memories flow back through my mind. Reality strikes. I'm really gong to miss those cinderblock walls and grey-tiled floor. The desk is not empty, but cluttered with books, papers and a half empty cup of coffee. My book shelves reflect the memorabilia I've collected throughout my years here.

I remember the single carload it took to bring my belongings to campus Freshman Year. Now I think I need a 18-wheeler to clear the place out.

I sit down for a moment and realize that I won't just miss this room but the memories locked up in it — the special friendships and the bull sessions; the laughs and the tears; all-nighters and the social gatherings (It's amazing how many people can fit in one of those rooms) .

. . . I guess I'll always have the memories.

Living in the Dorms and LOVING IT!

Remember your roommate? And the weirdo down the hall who listened to loud African music? How about your first gang-shower? Still have your toiletry bucket?

Chances are, you have many classic memories of living in the URI dorms. Toga parties . . . Secret Santas . . . Popcorn . . . "The Mail Is In" . . . Some of your best (and worst!) memories probably stem from your years as a URI dorm resident.

There's something very special about sleeping, eating, studying, partying, laughing, crying, and surviving among 250 different personalities. There's something special . . . something very, very special . . . about Dorm-Life.

Anyone who has ever lived in a URI college dorm has earned at least the ink on their college diploma, because Dorm-Life is, indeed, as much a part of a URI education as pre-registration in Keaney, classes in Chafee, and final exams.

Certainly life in one of URI's 18 dorms isn't always pizza and beer. There are new roommates to relate to, loud stereos to ignore, thick textbooks to open, and many sad suppers to swallow. There are also rules, RHCs, RAs and sometimes riots.

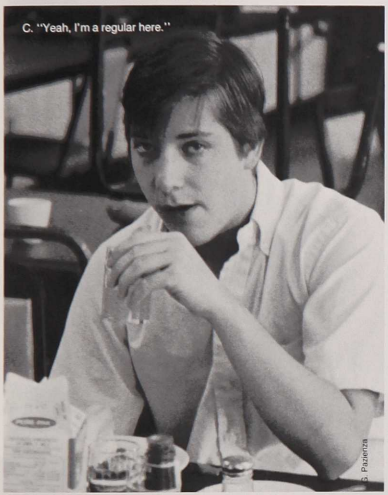

But Dorm-Life has as many advantages as well. It can be as satisfying and rewarding as each person makes it. Where else can you open your room door and be barraged with visitors . . . or play ping pong, pool, or pac-man only a stairwell away. Where else can you wake up at 7:45 for an 8:00 am class . . . pull an all-nighter and not even realize it . . . be treated to tasty — tuna-melts and fish-a-la-Rita in the same day . . . hear Luke and Laura's voices echo throughout an entire building . . . sleep with open windows on mid-February nights . . . take a scalding hot shower (flush!) on cool Autumn mornings. Where else can you live, learn, and grow along with 5000 different people, and still maintain a sense of your own individuality? Where else . . . but in the URI dorms.

College usually lasts four years. Dorm-Life may last less if you choose the commuter, line, or Greek scene. That's why it's important to take advantage of every opportunity and reward Dorm-Life has to offer — lasting friendships, special moments and memories, insight on people, and self-growth and maturity.

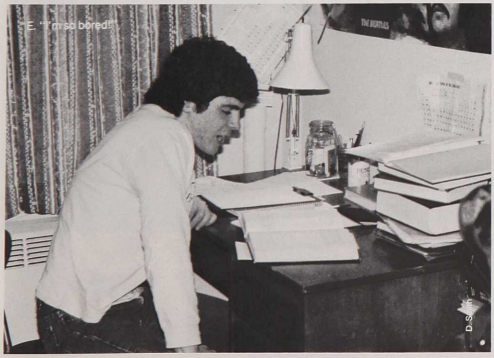

Such things cannot be experienced under Mom and Dad's roof. That's why . . . There's something very special, indeed, about Dorm-Life.

BEING A GREEK and . . .

GREEK LIFE — Those two words mean so many different things to many different people. First of all, there are the stereotyped images of sororities and fraternities: The Clean Cut Snob who is a member only because he is rich, and the Drunken Slob who joins a House because "who cares why I'm in college." These images become shattered when one takes a closer look at the facts. It is true that there are added monetary costs in being a member of a fraternity or sorority, but when these costs are totaled up the actual money spent is equal to or even less than dorm costs. As for not caring about college, facts show that there are less college dropouts among Greeks than any other lifestyle, Greeks usually partake in more campus organizations, and their G.P.A. is usually higher than other lifestyles here at U.R.I.

Well, enough about stereotypes, and more about actual Greek Life. Parties and meetings you may say? Well there is much more to Fraternities and Sororities than that. One important function of fraternities and sororities is to serve society. Each year many Greek Houses participate in philanthropic projects to raise money to benefit special charities. Here at U.R.I. such projects include Phi Kappa Psi's Bounce-a-thon, Theta Chi's Paddy Murphy, Lambda Chi Alpha's SPK (Sorority President Kidnapping), plus many more including the many candy-grams sororities sponsor. All of the proceeds go to charities such as Cystic Fibrosis, Multiple Sclerosis, and Meeting Street School — only naming a few.

Besides all the things that sorority or fraternity members do, one important idea remains. This is Brotherhood and Sisterhood — and it is here that one finds long lasting friendships, friendships that last for a lifetime. All Greeks know that once you are a sister or brother, you are one for life no matter where you go to across this nation.

It is true that Greek Life is not for everyone because of the responsibilities involved, the lifestyle itself, etc., but for those that are part of the Greek System THEY WEAR THEIR LETTERS PROUDLY AND THEY WOULDN'T WANT IT ANY OHTER WAY!!

GREEK WEEK Let the Games Begin!!

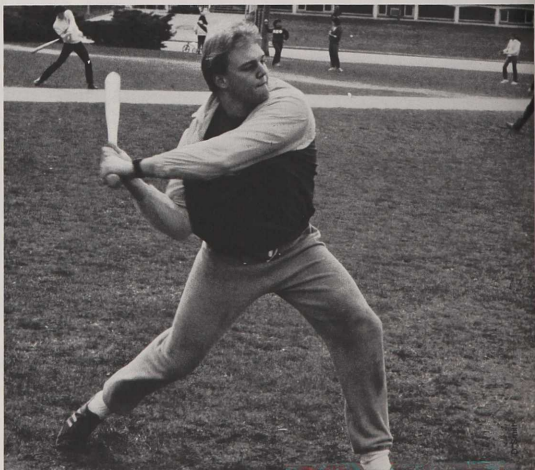

One of the highlights of the year for the Greeks is the Greek Week Competition held during the second week of April. The week of games encourages better relationships between sororities and fraternities by teaming one sorority with two fraternities for the competition. The competition includes individual events as well as team efforts such as the tricycle race, Volkswagen push, swim relays, etc. The highlight of the week competition is Greek Sing. It is the one competition in which each House pulls together as one unit. The winners for Greek Sing this year were Sorority Division — Chi Omega, the Best Conductor — Chi Omega, Best Accompaniment — Sigma Delta Tau Fraternity Divison — Sigma Chi, Best Conductor as well as Best Accompaniment also went to Sigma Chi. The overall Greek Week Competition was won by Alpha Zi Delta, and Phi Gamma Delta.

Living Down the Line . . . and Loving It!!

M. BRENNAN

G. PAZIENZA

G. PAZIENZA

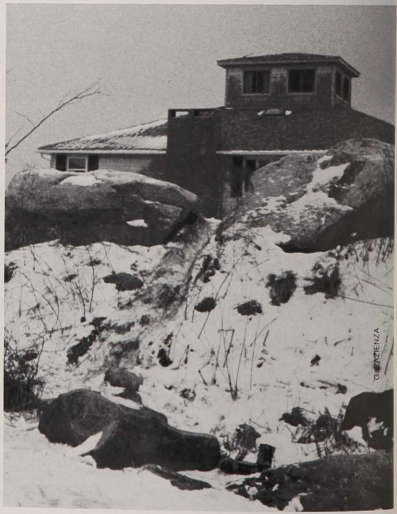

"Oh no! The electric company is threatening to shut off the lights again! What are we going to do?" Unfortunately, this phrase may be all too familiar for those students who live "down the line." Living down the line can best be described as the great learning experience, an experience which involves paying bills, cooking meals, cleaning, freezing, but most of all, lots of fun!

Living down the line is just one of the many alternatives students have to living on campus and many students take advantage of this alternative in their third and fourth years here at U.R.I. Living down the line means living off-campus in one of southern Rhode Island's many beach houses that are rented to thousands of students each year. Let me tell you firsthand, there is really nothing like it! The freedom, the feeling of home, independence — it's great!

(cont'd on p. 67)

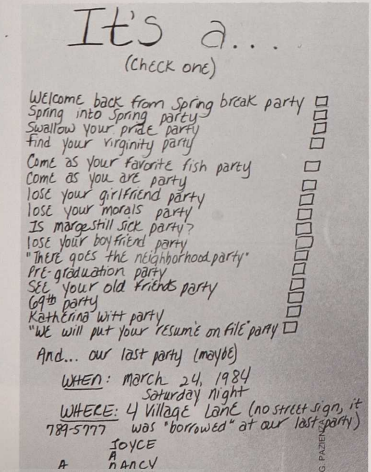

Although there's no substitute for living down the line, it does have its negative as well as its positive aspects. It takes a very versatile person to be able to live down the line — a person that possesses some of the following qualities — the ability to live like an eskimo in the winter, bundled up in layers of clothing because you can't afford the heating bill — a certain degree of inventiveness when you are trying to think of yet another way to fix Kraft Macaroni and Cheese for the fifth night in a row! — Mathematical abilities when you're at the supermarket trying to figure out if the groceries you have are worth more than you have in your pocket (including change)! — A certain amount of physical conditioning possessing the ability to shower, run to your room, change, get in your car, drive to school and run to your class in 10 minutes for your 8:00 class! — A religious attitude for the prayer that you sometimes need when your car is on "E" and you've got $1.00 and need to make it to school!

Living down the line involves being a jack of all trades, but it is an experience that is highly recommeded — where else could you clear your mind about the "F" you got on an exam by walking down the beach — there's nothing like it!!

Not ANOTHER LINE!!!

When you were kids in grade school, your teachers always said that the shortest distance between two points was an orderly, straight line. At the time, you truly believed in the existence of such a line. But you then entered this beloved university, and you finally realized that the only straight line on campus was in your Math 107 class. This opinion was strengthened when you went to registration down at Keaney Gym. How many times did you stand in the English line for an hour, only to find your desired class section closed? A straight, orderly line at registration? That would go against URI tradition.

How about when you finally did get a class, and you couldn't stand it. That's when you all got drop-add forms and packed yourselves tightly in the registrar's office. It may have been uncomfortable, but it sure was a great way to meet people up close and personal.

Speaking of comfortable surroundings, did you ever try to get athletic down at the Keaney weight room at 3:00 p.m. on a Monday? Unless you're heavily into bodybuilding, you probably didn't feel like waiting 2 hours for a bench, or an hour between sit-ups.

And after you shed all your excess weight at the gym, you went to pack it back on at one of the dining halls. If you like to eat at 5:00, you undoubtedly knew you had to get there at 4:30. Those half-hour lines were definitely killers, and definitely not worth it.

But you always put up with them, because it was all part of the learning experience. The lines were no fun at the time, but sometime in the future you just might wish you could stand in one just one more time.

Please Insert Your Card . . .

The spring semester brought some changes to the URI campus, including the closing of the campus branch of Rhode Island Hospital Trust.

Responding to the current trend toward the use of automatic teller machines for banking, the full-service branch underwent a "reconfiguration" into a "satellite" branch, with all banking done by computer.

For students, this meant longer lines at the two ATM's, and dealing with mass hysteria when both machines went down and the last bus for Providence was pulling away as you wait for the money to pay for your ticket.

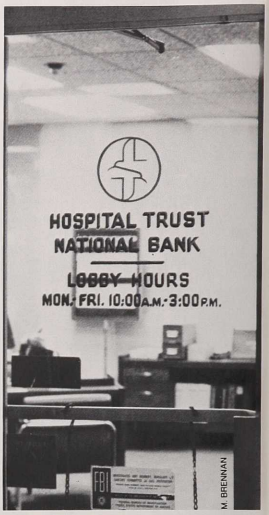

The URI branch, located in the Memorial Union, now has only one teller to handle corporate relationships, such as the University Club and two customer service representatives to open and close accounts.

A senior vice president from Hospital Trust said that the change was a response to quick turnover in the URI accounts and a new reliance on automatic teller machines which replace human tellers.

In addition, the R.I. State Employees Credit Union, also located in the Memorial Union, has picked up the ability to handle cash transaction. So students can, if they want to, talk to a real, live teller.

This is just one of the many ways URI has been hit by the age of technology.

No Pets On Campus

DOGS, SNAKES, SPIDERS, CATS, HAMSTERS, GUINEA PIGS, GOLDFISH and even BIRDS are among the list of animals that can be found on campus at U.R.I. Many animals seem to have made their homes among the busy lives of many college students.

Why do these students take the risk of getting caught with an illegal pet? The answer varies. Some keep a pet solely for company, especially on those long weekends when everybody has gone home or is out. Others say a pet is someone (?) who is always willing to listen to one's problems. And still other people keep a pet in their dorm room simply as a conversation piece. (What other reason could someone have for having a pet snake!)

Along with these good points that having a pet in a dorm room come the bad points. Whose turn it is to feed the pet, change the litter or buy the food to name a few. The worries of getting caught and losing the cute little animal are other examples of problems that must be dealt with when trying to keep a pet hidden behind closed doors.

It seems to me that besides these few minor drawbacks, the risk of keeping a pet in a dorm room is well worth it. After all, a pet often becomes one's best friend.

Return of the Pub

Listening to a jukebox playing your favorite songs, or maybe just enjoying a mellow guitarist while sipping an ice cold beer. What more could a hard working college student ask for?

After three seemingly endless years, the University's Pub reopened on the first day of classes in September of 1983. Students were welcomed back with "Miller Nights," "Stroh's Nights," and various happy hours.

The pub was closed down three years ago mainly because the drinking age was raised to 20 years old, said the Pub's General Manager Dan Tenzer. The only place students could be served alcohol on campus was in the America's Cup Room.

The Pub had many problems with re-opening, Tenzer said. The South Kingston Police and the Universities administration were afraid of drunk driving and other related problems it could cause.

"We had to start from scratch," Tenzer said. Along with the installation of the new jukebox, there was plenty of electrical work to be done.

During the day from 11 to 4, Monday through Friday, the Pub serves sandwiches, chips, and other snack-type foods. The Pub serves beer and wine from 4:30 to 12:00 a.m. during the week and opens at 12:00 p.m. on the weekends.

The opening of a Caserta's Pizza adjoining the Pub has helped the snackbar. Caserta's cannot serve soda and the Pub does.

"When the Pub first opened, many students did not realize it was open seven days a week," waitress Laura Onoratti said. The Pub has really picked up all the nightly specials, super socials and entertainment.

Most of the Pub's business comes from on-campus students, fraternities and sororities. However, during the day you might see professors come in for something to eat.

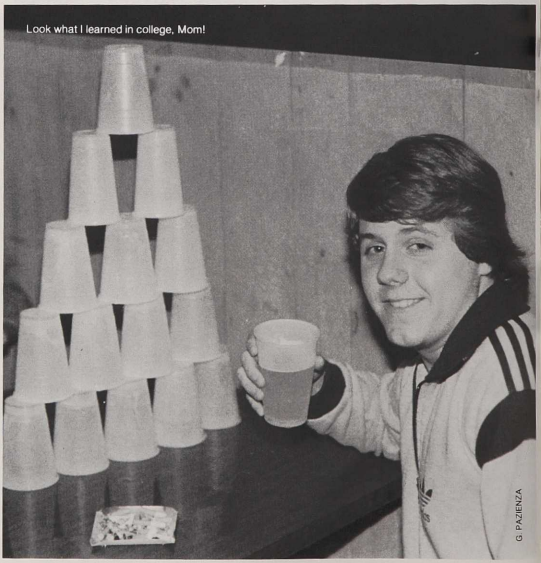

The Pub has four operational managers and about 40 other employees, including waitresses, waiters, bartenders and doorpeople.

Every night there are drink specials and occasional entertainers during Friday's happy hour. Guitarist Ray Boston played during a happy hour in October.

"This is all new to us," Tenzer said. Right now we would like to encourage super socials, entertainers and maybe get a few bands in the future.

Students "Get It Up" at the Pub

What Time Is It? Cock-Tail-Time! This was a common question and answer throughout the Ray Boston appearance in the Pub. Singer Boston returned to URI this fall and was met with a capacity crowd of Ready-to-Party students.

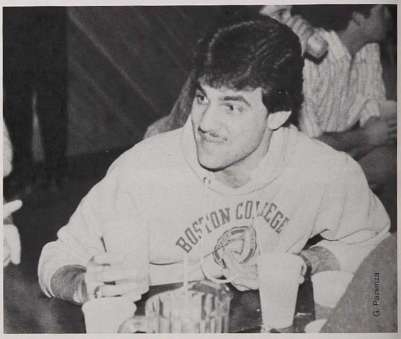

Boston's guitar playing, singing and quick wit always seem to attract a rowdy audience who are eager to loosen up with a few beers and good music.

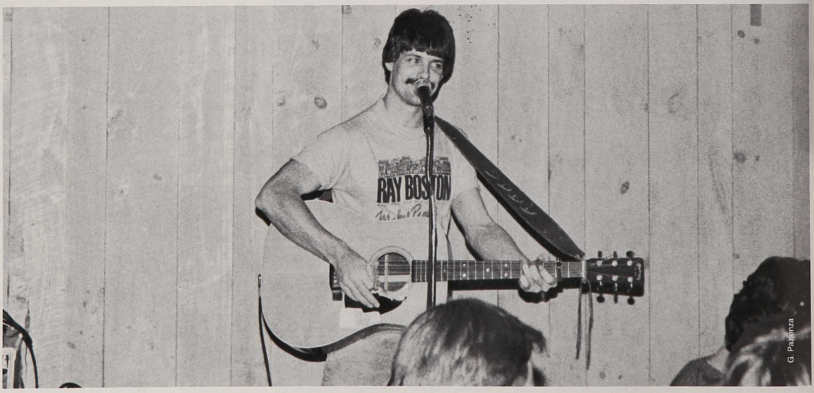

Sponsored by Weekenders, Boston delighted students with some of his own renditions of popular 70's and 80's music. Kazoo-playing students accompanied Boston's singing and guitar playing.

The happy hour started the school year on an upbeat note.

Who can possibly forget the joys of CHM 226; the vacuum filtrations, the reflux reactions, the creation of dyes which never colored the cloth but permanently stained our hands the colors of the rainbow. Somehow, a business major will never be able to appreciate the sight of a frustrated pharmacy student begging on bended knee to the solution in front of him in the hopes that a precipitate will form.

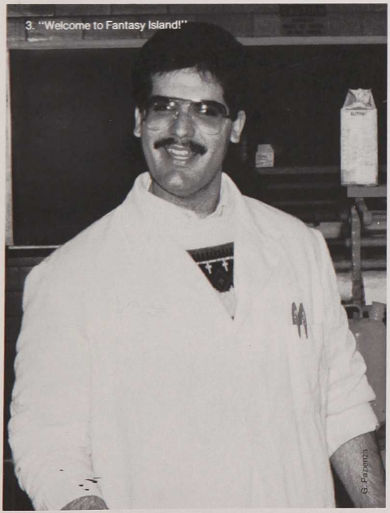

Of course, if chemistry doesn't happen to turn your head, perhaps the fun-filled world of genetics or microbiology is the thing for you. Fruit flies, Pseudomonas aeruginosa, the assortment is endless. While other students play frisbee on the quad, genetics students look at the 6353rd generation fly and hope to see red eyes staring back. Happy hour at Casey's? Not for the LO8 section of MIC 201. Today is the day to gram stain a species of bacteria only found in three day old Butterfield tasty tuna melt.

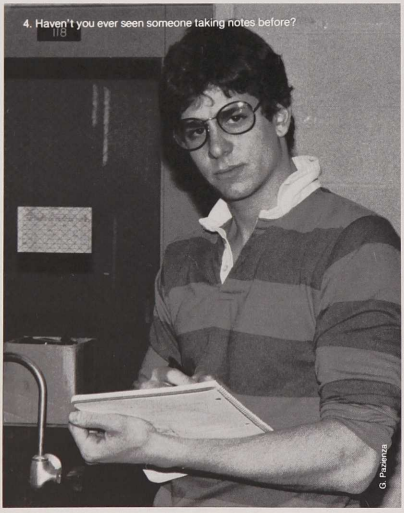

The period finally ends though — the last beaker is washed, agar plate streaked, microscope put away. A smile slowly creeps onto your tired face as you think about the expression on the TA's face as he tried to figure out why your solution was green when everyone elses was pink.

Rhode Island's Summer Wonderland

The Spring season is notorious for bringing out the best in people — and the worst in students. Those warm sunny days are hard to resist. As we begin the search for our shorts, we start to notice the effects of the weather on our spirits. The campus looks beautiful and we feel an aliveness that has been long buried under the winter blues. Unfortunately, as students, springtime is the most trying. There is no longer the excitement of being at school as there is in the fall. In fact, the only excitement seems to be in finishing the year and heading on to new ventures or out into the summer sun. Studying becomes almost impossible, and going to classes seems like torture. We can't concentrate on anything academic for more than five minutes, while our thoughts turn to the inevitable and the obvious — THE BEACHES! Even though there are many good places on campus to catch a few rays of sunshine, what could possibly compare to the beaches.

After all, Rhode Island isn't called The Ocean State for nothing. You won't have any difficulty finding the beaches, but you will have difficulty deciding which beach to go to, when to go, and what to bring.

If you are not a hardcore aficionado of one beach, you will be able to enjoy the variety of visiting different ones. Rhode Island has so many beaches that you should be able to find a couple of favorites — at least the research can be fun. There are too many beaches in this state to mention them all, but there are a few that should be noted. Different ones provide different possibilities and here the Possibilities are Endless! If you travel down to Galilee, you can spend some time on the beach, or take advantage of two very pleasant distractions. As a person who enjoys seafood, you are in the right place. Although you certainly have a choice of where to eat, you should stop by the deck of Champlains for a great view of the boats and a good selection of food. George's also provides a nice deck from which to view the sights and enjoy some liquid refreshments.

Narragansett beach is another possibility. Besides soaking up the sun, relaxing, or watching the surfers, the stores right across the street are a nice diversion and fun to explore.

Scarborough beach is a third option. Here you will find many people enjoying the sun, sand and perhaps a pizza or two at Caserta's.

If you are seeking a quieter atmosphere you may want to try Moonstone beach. There isn't anything here except the beach, but it is nice and may be the perfect escape.

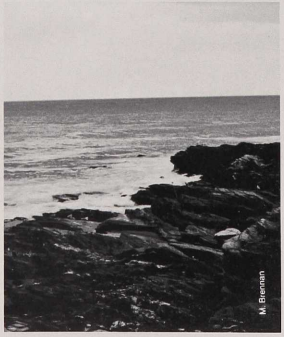

Now that you have figured out which of the many beaches to visit, you may be thinking about when the best time is to go. An exhilarating run early in the morning could be the perfect wake-up. A few hours in the afternoon might be a good break, and allow you to slow down and think over the day's events. Of course evening is always a nice time for a walk along the sand. If you are a real beach lover you may choose to go all three times!

Once you have decided when you are going, the next question is what to bring along. Do you want to bring a friend or is this a much needed solo trip? How many times have you heard somebody say, "I need some time to think, I'm heading to the beach." Should you bring your books — has anybody ever really managed to get any work done at the beach? How about the times when you feel like being active? It might be the perfect day to remember that frisbee, kite, or favorite four-legged friend.

The beaches in Rhode Island provide a great escape anytime. No year is complete without the leisurely walk along the beach. This can be a great way to sort things out and listen to one's own thoughts, or it can be a nice way to spend some quiet time with somebody else. It is safe to assume that many problems have been solved, many hurt feelings soothed and many dreams struggled with at the beach. There is something comforting in looking around and seeing miles of sand, and hearing the gentle rumbling of the waves. Somehow it seems so much easier to put things into perspective in this setting.

U.R.I.'s yearbook, known as the Renaissance is filled with lots of photos of the year's events at U.R.I. This group of hard working students spends MANY hours trying to make the best possible yearbook.

THE GREAT SWAMP GAZETTE

The Great Swamp Gazette is URI's award winning news and feature magazine. This magazine offers alternative reading for the URI community and they welcome writers for news stories, feature stories and short stories, and poetry.

THE URI SKI CLUB

The Ski Club started the year early in October by trying to pick up some of the pieces from the previous year. As an organization set up for the benefit of the students, it was our goal to make sure that the club would continue and would provide all who joined in with the best possible ski trip in all aspects. The annual trip to Sugarbush was held in January and was a great success. Lodging in the luxurious summit condominiums, excellent ski conditions, and an unbeatable schedule of parties assured everyone of a fantastic ski vacation.

MORTAR BOARD

Mortar Board is a national honor society for college seniors. Juniors which are scholastically qualified are given applications and twenty-six students are selected based on outstanding leadership and community service, along with scholastic ability.

THE GOOD 5¢ CIGAR Bring Students the News

Why do you do it? We at the Cigar are constantly asked this mind-boggling question.

Why do we spend 40 or more hours a week here, surviving crisis after crisis, headache after headache and complaint after complaint.

Because we love it. Even if the lead story fell through or the film got loaded backwards so there are no pictures for tomorrow's paper.

There will always be another chance. Another deadline to strive for, another lead story even better than yesterday's and another edition to be proud of.

Running a newspaper which comes out four times a week is a full-time job. It means a maximum of 5 hours sleep, lots of coffee and missed meals, and the embarrassment of explaining how you meant to write your speech 201 paper but the typesetting machine broke down, the Cigar van was in an accident and six editors had the flu.

It means handling 40 complaints about that editorial you knew you'd get flak for, and listening to the Dean's office's reasons why we should not have called the new director of minority student services to tell him he got the job . . . before they did.

But there is a special sense of unity here at The Cigar, and a feeling of accomplishment and pride that makes it all worth while. Seeing people actually reading our work, and learning more about URI from it helps us get through that deadline pressure.

Knowing that you have done your best, and that tomorrow's paper is on its way to be printed into 7000 copies gives us the satisfaction we need to press on.

So even if the front page looks crooked and we're not ecstatic about that letter to the editor that questions my morals, it's okay.

Tomorrow is another issue. And the challenge of tomorrow makes today more bearable.

THE DANCE COMPANY OFFERS OPPORTUNITY

The University of Rhode Island Dance Company, comprised of students and community residents, is devoted to the artistic performance of dance. As an extension of the regular dance curriculum in the Physical Education Department, the company offers its members choreographic opportunities and training in the technical aspects of production. Artists-in-residence programs provide additional options for students to study on campus with leading professionals in the field.

Auditions are held in early October. Admission to the Company is determined by an adjudication board. An Apprentice Dance Troupe (ADT) is open to all interested students or university/community individuals who wish to improve skill and expertise in dance. Although the company emphasizes the styles of modern and jazz, choreographic works in modern ballet, folk and ethnic forms have been incorporated into the Company's repertoire.

THE SURF CLUB WINS N.E.'S

The URI Surf Club was readmitted early this fall into the URI program. The club got its start again after Richard Ryan (president) and Josh Burdick (Vice president) decided that there was a large interest in surfing in the URI community. With over 40 members, the URI Surf Club is a real threat to local surf teams throughout New England. Most of the members are not from the New England area. They are from all over the world in places ranging from Italy, Cuba, Hawaii to New York, New Jersey and R.I. The diversity of the member's backgrounds aids in the competition scene. The New England Championships were held in November, 1983 in Narragansett, R.I.

URI members swept first through fourth place in the A-AA Men's Final, beating teams from New York, Mass., New Hampshire and Rhode Island. The finalists were: first — Chris Burns, second — Josh Kurdick, third — Rochard Ryan, fourth — Peter Kent. There was also a strong individual showing by Andy Cook. Hopefully next year's team will be as successful as this year's surf club.

S.E.C. BRINGS ENTERTAINMENT TO U.R.I.

SEC brings a variety of entertainment to the URI community. The committee started the year off with a tribute to the Beatles. The Broadway production "Beatlemania" took URI students back to the 1960's, Halloween was celebrated with Steve Smith and the Nakeds.

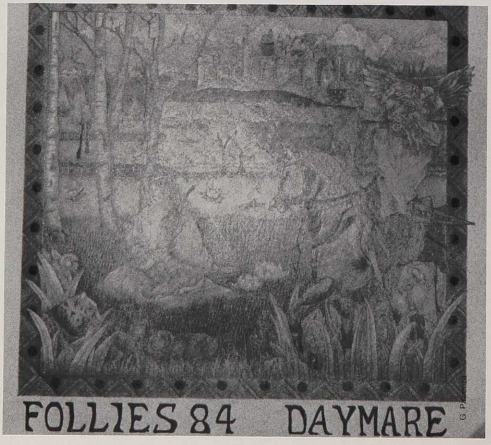

Not only did students enjoy music on campus, they were also entertained by with mime Trent Arterberry's performance of "Silent Moves" in Edwards Auditorium.

Simon Sez challenged the student body to see if there was anyone who could keep up with him in that ever popular game.

Dancing shoes was put on again for Let's Active and Critical Few as well as URI's annual Spring Weekend Concert and the Bluegrass Festival.

SEC is made up of a general membership who are interested in better entertainment at URI.

FOLLIES BAZAAR MAKES PROFESSIONAL ALBUM

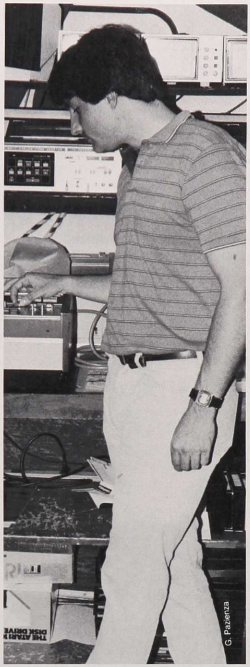

Follies Bazaar is an organization for URI undergraduates that provides students with an opportunity to record and practice a professional quality record album on an annual basis.

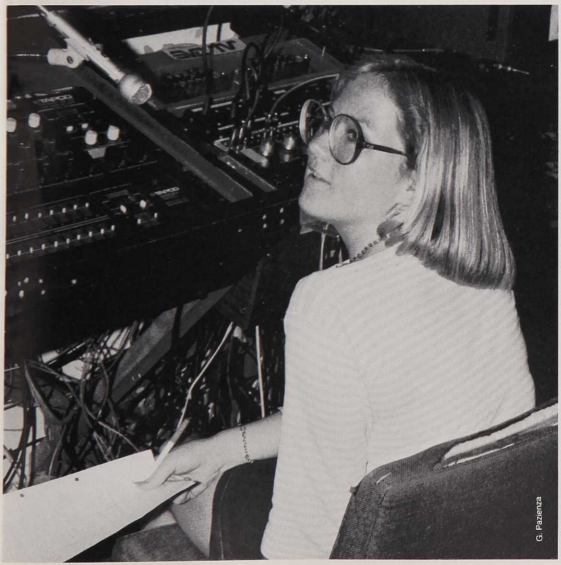

Students submit original compositions on cassette and these songs are reviewed by the Selection Committee. If a song is chosen to be on the album, the composer and his or her group record and mix these songs on 24 tracks at Normandy Sound, Inc. in Warren, RI.

The album is usually released in May and goes on sale in the K.S.S. Record Coop in the Union.

WRIU PLAYS IT ALL FOR URI

WRIU AM-580, FM-90.3 is a student run radio station at URI. It is the largest education station in R.I. AM broadcasts on campus only with news, music, game shows, and other programming. FM programming includes a variety of music, news and public service messages. WRIU transmits 2700 watts and is licensed by the F.C.C. It can be heard from Long Island, New York to coastal Massachusetts. All personnel from manager to disc jockeys are URI undergrads.

LB/LS PROVIDE A "BIG" FRIEND FOR KIDS

Little Brother/Little Sister gives URI the opportunity to become friends with underprivileged children from the South County area. One to one relationships are formed between a URI student and a child. The student becomes more than a simple friend with the child and the relationships formed often carry on longer. A van picks up and drops off the children and many social events and parties are held throughout the year to entertain the kids.

C.H.E.A.R.S. OFFERS INFO. ON ALCOHOL

C.H.E.A.R.S. (Campus Health Education Alcohol Resources Service) is a peer counseling and alcohol information center, which is located in 406 Roosevelt Hall.

The organization offers information on all aspects of alcohol, conducts workshops throughout the campus on such topics as Drinking and Driving, Physiological Effects and the like.

C.H.E.A.R.S. is available to the entire campus, on Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. for walk-ins and also offers a hotline. It is staffed by trained volunteers and provides referrals to the alcohol educator.

SPEAK OUT WITH SPEAK EASY

Peer counseling and sexuality information is available at Speakeasy, located in 408 Roosevelt Hall between the hours of 11 and 4 Monday thru Friday. Student volunteers are trained in a special section of the department of Nursing's Human Sexuality class.

All conversations are confidential and the atmosphere is comfortable.

Besides the walk-in center and hotline in Roosevelt, workshops are offered on various aspects of sexuality, including birth control and sexual harrassment, in and out of office.

ARMY RESERVE OFFICER TRAINING CORPS PROGRAM

The Army Reserve Officer Training Corps Program offers students the opportunity to experience a lifestyle that is academically enriching and physically challenging. Army ROTC has been an integral part of the University since 1894, and has contributed more than 1850 officers to the service of our country.

The URI ROTC program is conducted on an informal basis with particular attention devoted to individual desires and career objectives of the cadets. Through practical training in management, leadership, and group dynamics, the program prepares students for both military and civilian careers.

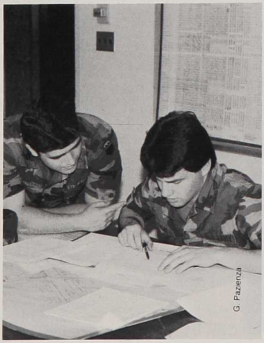

Students enrolled in the program have the opportunity to apply for two and three year full-tuition scholarships. Additionally they may attend such courses as airborne, air assault, ranger, and cold weather survival school. Preparation for the Army Flight Program is also available.

Upon graduation, cadets are commissioned as Second Lieutenants in the United States Army, and have their option to choose active duty, or reserve component duty in conjunction with their civilian schools.

CAREER SERVICES HELP PREPARE FOR THE "REAL WORLD"

Career Services is an organization that most students do not utilize until their senior year when obtaining a job tops the list of priorities. And even then, most students leave the University with the feeling that Career Services is a sort of job placement center, which in fact it is.

But even more than that, as the four career counselors readily agree, the office has many other services to offer URI students. From resume writing workshops to professional career counseling, the staff at Career Services is busy offering services to accommodate students eight hours a day. As seniors already know the office offers a variety of career development workshops, ranging from preparing for interviews to applying to graduate schools, available practically every day.

Instrumental in providing services to students, CA's undergo an intensive training program every September to prepare themselves for leading workshops and performing a host of other services. These "CA's" act as peer counselors, and learn to answer questions ranging from "How do I make a resume?" to "What can I major in?" Available every day from 2 pm to 4 pm for walk-in hours, the CA's see as many as eight students a day and offer helpful referrals and advice.

Also essential to the office's success is its receptionist, Jane Kilner, who returned to Career Services after a year's absence. Jane is the lady who keeps things rolling, doing everything from assigning students their interviews to making sure the recruiters' day runs smoothly. It's not unusual to see a line of eight or nine students in front of her desk waiting to ask Jane questions, and it's not unusual to see her keep her cool after answering the same question 50 times or more.

The core of Career Services is the professional staff that counsels students on a daily basis and organizes special events. Pat Maslin-Ostrowski, coordinator of career development programs, works with the CA's to organize programs of interest to all students. This year, a series of speaker programs entitled "Profiles of Success: A Career Conversation Series," covered such topics as dual career couples and entrepreneurship. With guest speakers, many of whom were URI graduates, the programs gave students a special personalized insight into career topics. One program even broke a Career Services record with 80 people in attendance. Also notable is "JEDI — A Journey to Educational Decisions and Insights" that was held in September of 1983. "JEDI" was a major fair where undecided students gained a better insight into the various majors available.

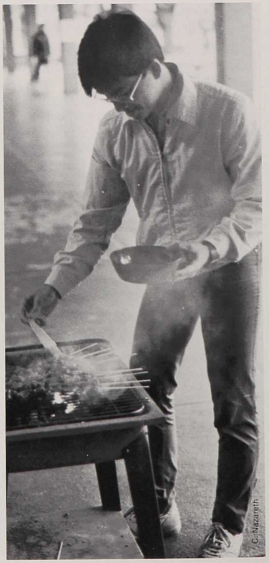

So as graduating seniors head into a world of Help Wanted ads and job interviews, most of them will remember sitting in at least one workshop in Roosevelt Hall, or dropping their resumes off to be critiqued and thank Career Services for preparing them a little more.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS ORGANIZATION

The purpose of this organization is to provide a common meeting place for all members of the university community, especially those from foreign countries, with the objectives of fostering the academic, cultural and social aspects of the university life.

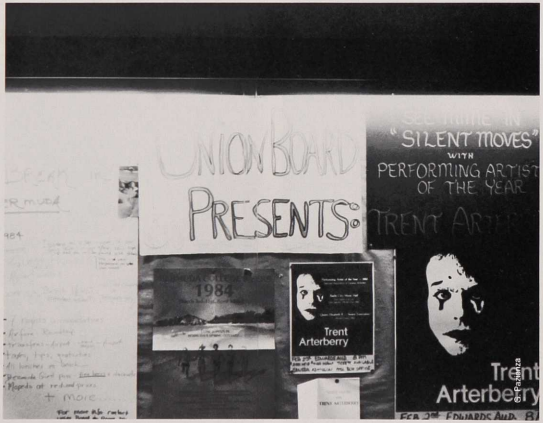

Events of the year 1984 included International Week (February 27-March 3), which included craft exhibits, food fairs, films, a dinner dance, fashion show and picnics.

We feel that our organization contributes to the enrichment of the university life, and we believe that 1985 will bring an even bigger variety of events from the side of the International Student Association.

MEMORIAL UNION BOARD OF DIRECTORS

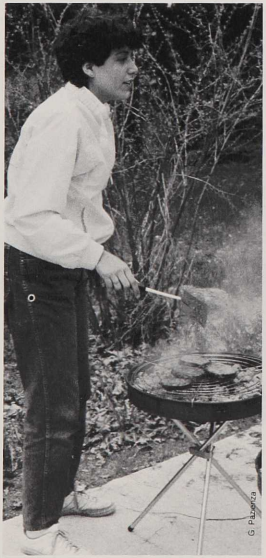

The Memorial Union Board of Directors exists to serve the campus and students in making the Memorial Union a vital portion of the college experience. The Union Board is a group of volunteer students concerned with day-to-day operations and programming in the Memorial Union. The programming council consists of committees such as travel, concerts, Spring Carnival, films and much more. The Operations Council consists of several committees including Union Operations and Food Services. These committees work closely with the staff to monitor building usage, policy, and services to the Student Community. The rewards of joining the Union Board can be unlimited.

HILLEL: Center for the Jewish Community on Campus

B'nai B'rith Hillel foundation is more or less the center of activity for the Jewish community on Campus. The core group of the organization is composed of those students with strong Jewish lifestyles. This group runs many activities including socials, classes, lectures, religious services, concerts and a meal plan. At URI, there are between one and four socials per month, and international Mishnah class, a mini course for credit on Jewish and general themes, a lunch program, Sukkot, Chanukkah and Purim services, a concert series, a daily Kosher meal plan and a Passover meal plan.

Hillel reaches other Jewish students through "Outreach:" They reach other students by running programs in dorms, frats, and sororities, having Board meetings in the dorms, frats and sororities. Both the student leaders and the staff have helped in this by introducing themselves and talking with students.

Hillel also helps Jewish students from Iran, Israel, South Africa, Central America, Belgium, Soviet Union and Italy with employment, housing registration, religious and financial problems.

Hillel reaches commuters and helps them become involved by sponsoring a lunch program during the day and by making Schidduchim (matches) between commuters looking for roommates.

A Judaic library at Hillel is also available. There are books about Israel, Jewish history, American Jewry, Torah, and many other topics.

URI Hillel educates the entire campus community as to upcoming religious holidays and have had them placed on the University calendar. This was done to bring forth the conflicts between a student's right to observe his religion, (Rosh Hashannah) and his University obligations (mid terms).

URI Hillel also works closely with URI students for Israel by lobbying and educating the community.

Hillel also is involved in a resource development program to raise funds from parents, the local community, the University, the Jewish federation of R.I. and other sources. A Jewish Art Festival, Tikun Olam, Holocaust education and Campus Jewish Appeal are some of the these activities sponsored by Hillel.

STUDENT HEALTH ADVISORY COMMITTEE

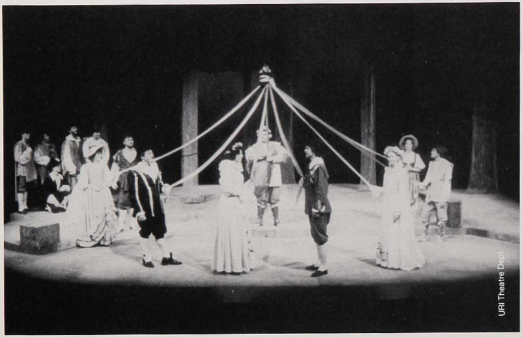

The Student Health Advisory Committee, otherwise known as SHAC, is a committee made up of both graduates and undergraduates that get together and make suggestions on the University Health Care Program. The group also helps with the Health Fair held in the Union.

STUDENT TECHNICAL SERVICES

Student Technical Service is run by students. It's purpose is to provide good quality sound and lighting equipment for the campus community. Student Tech. Services (STS) has provided concert sound and lighting for many events held by Weekenders, SEC, and Union Board. Additionally, technicians are made available to show movies and operate sound and lighting equipment.

THE 1983-1984 THEATRE DEPARTMENT

The 1983-84 URI/Theatre production season opened on October 19th with the premiere of a new play, LIVING IN KLUZEWSKI'S SHADOW, by Boston-based playwright, Robert Clyman. In keeping with the Theatre Department's longstanding commitment to the development of new plays and playwrights, Mr. Clyman had the opportunity to contribute to the script and to truly create a role.

WEEKENDERS KEEPS WEEKENDS FILLED WITH FUN

A wide variety of entertainment is sponsored by Weekenders to keep the weekends alive at URI. Weekenders sponsors such events as the one ton sundae, the semi formal at Rosecliff in Newport, various bands in the ballroom and numerous other activities.

AMATEUR RADIO CLUB ALLOWS WORLDWIDE TALK

The average Ham is just someone interested in radio. There are many facets to amateur radio. The technological, experimental builder or all around tacker. In the club's radio station you may find something going on day or night, weekday or weekend, year in and year out. Whenever you want to get away from the hustle and bustle of campus activities, you can pop down there to relax. Talk to someone on the other side of the world or someone on the other side of the street. If you don't want to use your voice, there is always Morse code and teletype. When the weather is warm, you can always hear the mechanical teleprinters rapping away outside, as far away as the Quad.

COMMUTERS GET TOGETHER IN THE LOUNGE

The Commuter Association is located on the third floor of the Union. There is a commuter lounge that is used by commuter students. They plan social activities and events to keep commuters involved with URI. They hold meetings in the commuter lounge. The staff is composed of commuters and the lounge provides a common meeting place for all those students that commute back and forth to campus.

KINGSTON STUDENT SERVICES

Kingston Student Services is a corporation on campus that is run exclusively by students. Its purpose is to provide services to the students of the Kingston Community as well as allow its membership the opportunity to get practical business experience.

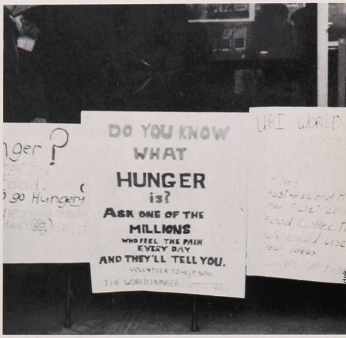

Currently in operation we have Union Disc, our record store, The Book Co-op, our used book exchange, The Youth Hostel, located on Route 138 and Sound and Lighting Equipment, which we rent to student organizations for various functions.

The policy making managers of the Company are the Board of Directors. These eight directors are the decision makers and entrepreneurs that provide direction and plans for the future of K.S.S.

Many new business ventures are in the making. Within the next few years we will be expanding our operations to provide more quality goods and services to the U.R.I. community.

CATHOLIC STUDENT ORGANIZATION

The Catholic Student Association is composed of two groups. An undergraduate "Student Board" evaluates and sets goals for Catholic Campus Ministry and plans and organizes Catholic Student activities. The "Late Bloomers" (22+years) is an organization for graduate students, older students, and alumni. Both groups plan social, cultural and religious events.

The Catholic Student Association seeks to foster a Christian Community on campus by coordinating and programming spiritual, cultural, and social activities through the Catholic Center. Membership is open to any URI student interested in fostering Christian ideals.

This year the Catholic Student Board developed educational programs to be used at Sunday liturgies, sponsored Halloween, Christmas, and Mardi Gras extravaganzas, directed the programming of weekend movies in conjunction with the Saturday luncheon program at the Catholic Center.

The Late Bloomers (22+) group focused on discussions of the Catholic Bishop's Peace Pastoral and moral issues.

TOUR GUIDES; AN IMPORTANT PART OF URI

Tour guides play a very important role to URI, for these people are the ones who show incoming students URI. They are the people who give or help give someone an impression of URI that may make them chose URI as the college they attend. Prospective students hear about all aspects of the University from a URI student. The admissions office employs and trains all the tour guides.

RIPIRG

The Rhode Island Public Interest Research Group, Inc. (RIPIRG) is a statewide, independent, non-profit, public interest organization which conducts research, develops educational programs, and advocates on behalf of the students, citizens, and consumers. RIPIRG works on issues which affect the health, welfare and well being of citizens of Rhode Island. Past issues have been in the areas of environmental protection, consumer rights, energy policy, transportation, and the justice system.

RIPRIG is funded by students on member campuses which have affiliated with the organization, foundation and government grants, and private contributions. The main office and headquarters of RIPIRG are located in the Memorial Union.

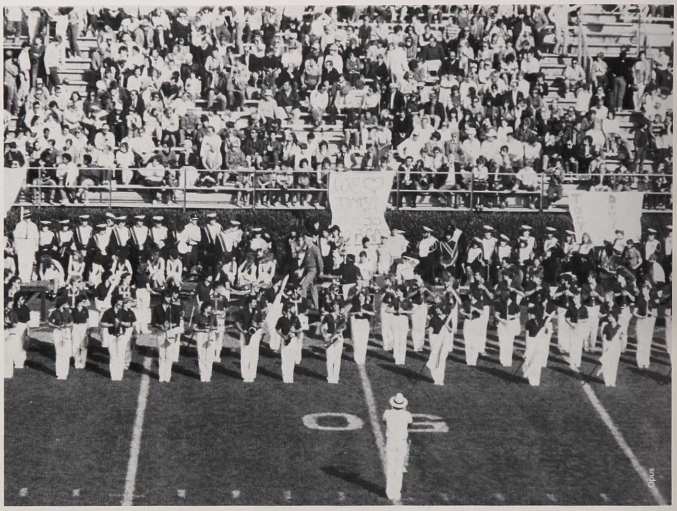

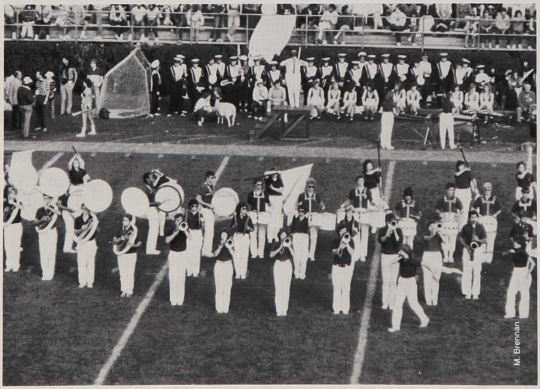

INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL AND PANHELLENIC ASSOCIATION

The Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Association are the governing bodies of the 16 fraternities and 8 sororities on campus. They work together to promote good relations between the Greeks and the URI Administration. They govern and oversee judical and financial matters and promote and serve the Greek community on campus. They organize and participate in yearly philanthropic events to raise money for charity including; Blood drives, Jump Rope for Heart, Kingston Improvement Association, Racquetball Recreation Run, and the URI Bake-Off, which raised money for the Paraplegic Association of Rhode Island. In addition, each house participates in their own philanthropic project yearly.

At the March 1984 Northeast Interfraternity Council Conference URI's Panhellenic Association won an award of Excellence for Community Service. This award was based on the 25 Panhels from Maryland to Maine. Also at the conference, Terry Tinkham was elected Vice-President of NEIFC in charge of fraternities in R.I., Mass., Conn., and New York City. These awards show the growth of the two organizations and the potential to strive toward excellence. IFC and Panhel will continually strive towards making the URI Greek Community the best it can be.

The university band is made up of about 100 people, including the drill team, dancers, feature twirler as well as the musicians. Some members are Music majors, but you are just as likely to find a Computer Science, Zoology, Engineering or Business Major in this organization. They all have one thing in common: they are willing to sacrifice their time to work towards a common goal for a successful show in return for some good times, new friends, and an unforgettable experience.

No longer "That" Ram Band, the URI Ram Band has adopted new image as a more dedicated and sophisticated marching band. It started 2 years ago with a change from a swing to corps style and continued on with this past year's "burning" of the bicentennial uniform. You may have noticed we no longer sport the patriotic red, white, and blue — we had found our uniforms sadly outdated and totally incompatable with our new style. While considering our options, a new development arose. Our first home game was going to be televised, and the appearance of the band was a sudden concern. We decided to dig out the pep band's white dickies and the new uniform became white pants with a short sleeved blue golf shirt. Once the weather turned cooler, we were thankful for the heavy sweatshirts (compliments of the athletic department) that arrived half way through the season. It was not a smooth running year in the uniform department, but with our new uniforms next season, we're sure to be a smash!

Besides supporting the team, we strive for recognition in our own right from the campus, community and other university bands. We participated in our first competition this year and we placed first in our division. Next season we hope to host a collegiate marching band competition here at URI. Yes, we'll have more hard work in the fall, but it's worth it. Just ask any member of the Ram Band!

THE STUDENT SENATE

The Student Senate, the backbone of URI, is where changes begin at URI. The senate is a group of dedicated students who spend many an hour working hard at making URI the best it can be. Student Senators represent all the various "types" of students at URI in an attempt to meet everyone's needs.

The senate works with matters concerning all aspects of the University including money, budget, academics, organization and is also responsible for funding the many organizations at URI.

Capturing the Essence of U.R.I.

I gasp and jump back as I meet my reflection in the mirror. Could this possibly be me? Could I have really changed so much in such a short time?

Yes, it is true. This could be a very humbling experience. I've changed from that scared and shy kid who came here a few years ago. It's funny, because it doesn't seem as though I've been here that long, and yet I can definitely see that I've changed — I've grown-up more. I suppose that it shouldn't really be that much of a surprise. After all, there were a lot of new experiences here. I had to learn to get along with people who were different from me. I had forgotten that so many of my friends in high school were so similar to me — same background, values, and expectations. I never realized that there were so many other types of people around. I think this realization hit me when I met my first roommate.

Even though I would never admit it, it wasn't easy being away from home. I guess I took a lot of things for granted. It wasn't too bad learning how to do my laundry — I learned the hard way why you should never put white underwear in with pink and blue shirts. I probably forgot to tell Mom how good her cooking was, and how nice it was not to have to worry about some of my bills — like the phone bill! I also realized that I missed those talks I used to have with my parents. They were always good at listening when I was trying to make a decision or at helping me to sort out my feelings and thoughts — it is not easy to do that over the phone. Somehow it also seemed easier to budget my money when I was living at home — I guess because I could always convince Mom or Dad to "lend" me a few bucks. I didn't know it at the time, but being away from home takes some adjusting. I can't believe that I slept through all my 8 am classes the first week of school because I was waiting for Mom to knock at my door.

I forgot to budget my time in the beginning. The work was more difficult than it had been in high school, but I couldn't seem to find the time to do it. I was busy during the day, and then at night. I kept finding myself drawn into conversations either in somebody's room or often times in the hallway. There was nobody to remind me to do my homework — although some professors hinted at it. Then again, I had to learn the hard way when exam time and final grades appeared.

The weekends were difficult in the beginning. I wanted to meet people, but I wasn't quite sure how to do this. It took me awhile to learn to socialize more and avoid lonely nights and days in my room. I found that I needed to change some of my expectations of other people. It wasn't that they were inferior to me, they were just different. When I learned to look at people in terms of what made them special, and what they had to give to others, I really learned a lot — probably some of the most important things in my life.

I guess I started dreaming at one point about what I wanted to be when I grew up — if I ever grew up. It wasn't always an easy decision. I found some areas that interested me, but I wasn't sure that I was ready to make a commitment to one field, or even sure that I would still want that kind of job in five years. I had some doubts about my abilities to be successful, (after all, the classroom is very different from the workplace) and I worried about whether I was really good enough. Somewhere along the line that worry mixed with excitement and anticipation. Maybe I could do a good job — I am pretty smart. I had learned a lot, I felt I could handle this job and I could even do it well. Surely I'd get recognition for my work if not an early raise.

After awhile I began to settle down. I liked what I was studying and I was going to get a good job and do well. I had learned that "Yes" I could survive away from my parents. I realized that college wasn't the ultimate test of independence, but it was a great step. If I could survive in college, then I could survive on my own in "The Real World." It's a nice feeling to know that I can be independent. I liked the people I spent time with, I had finally found my friends in this mass of people. I had some good times, had a lot of laughs (which balanced out the tears), and learned to share with other people. It was great to have that special friend I could really open up to and be myself without worrying about being liked. It was nice to find someone who thought I was pretty special. I have some great memories from my four years at URI.

I can remember how I felt being a freshman here, but when I look at myself as a senior I can't believe how much I've changed. I was challenged in so many ways. I learned to believe in what was important to me — not what somebody else told me to believe in. I learned what right and wrong meant to me. I found my thoughts, my ideals, my feelings were always being challenged in and out of the classroom. Some of those late night/early morning talks in people's rooms should have earned philosophy credits. If I wasn't sure who I was when I came to URI, at least I'm sure that I have a pretty good idea of who I am as I leave here. It wasn't easy being challenged, (at times it was kind of painful) and while I wasn't aware of it when it was happening, it was definitely growing up. One of the most important things that I learned was to believe in myself and to like myself for who I am.

There may be other times when I'm startled by my reflection in the mirror, but at least I feel confident that I'm going to like what I see. Now that I've grown-up this far, it can only get better. And for all of us professionally and personally the Possibilities are Endless!

I suppose that I shouldn't take any of these changes for granted — they didn't always come so easily. I didn't think that I would ever be a senior in college — now I can't believe that I was ever a freshman. I learned so much here — things that will never be reflected in my transcript, only in myself. As I leave URI I'm taking so much with me — not just all the things that I've accumulated or four years filled with memories — but a new me.

Those WILD And CRAZY College Days . . .

Making Major Decisions

As we look back on our years at URI, we remember all the experiences that we have had. The experiences are as different as all the students here, but there are a few things that we have in common. One example is that of choosing an academic major. No doubt the act of deciding on a major is a crucial one in any college setting. Even the most laid back students come to URI with at least some thoughts of sometime selecting an area of study to concentrate on.

Some of us may have known which area we planned to pursue as soon as we were able to walk and talk. Others may have received a subtle, (and sometimes not so subtle), message from parents about what is best for us. Still others may have decided to wait until they received threatening letters telling them they couldn't graduate without a declared major.

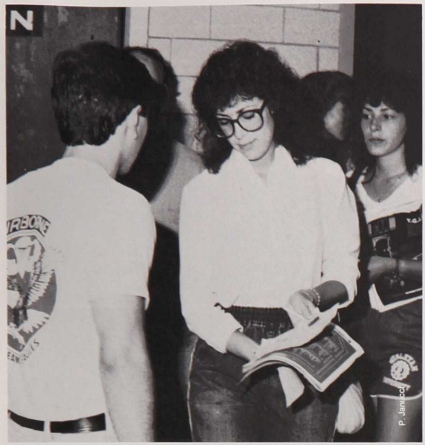

Since we are all different people, with different ideas, expectations, and approaches, it seems likely that there would be many different ways to choose a major. These ways merit mention here, although it should be noted that some approaches appear to be less successful than others.

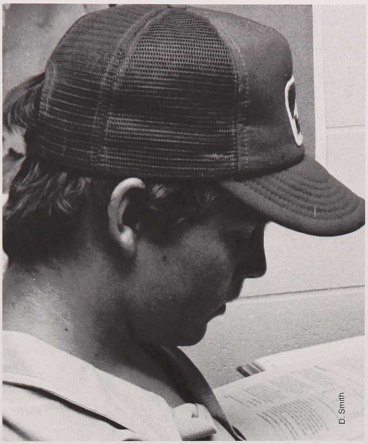

Of those techniques which seem less effective we have: selecting a major by drawing out of a hat, selecting a major in which class times don't interfere with the soaps, selecting a major with the fewest number of textbooks, selecting the same major as a roommate or friend to assist in the tedious job of taking notes, selecting a major because it impresses other people, selecting a major because senior year you find that you just happen to have enough credits in this area, selecting a major that won't interfere with anything else, selecting a major because you can pronounce the names of all the professors in that department, selecting a major because you don't want to feel left out, and selecting a major so people will stop asking you if you have selected a major yet.

To be fair, some mention should be given to those people who aspire to be permanent students. This can be accomplished in one of two ways. The first way the people never decide on a major. Instead they just collect academic credits in any and all departments, being careful never to accumulate the correct amount for a degree. The second way, people continually change their major. This can be done at various intervals: daily, weekly, bi-weekly, monthly, bi-monthly, each semester etc... Of course one needs to be careful when changing daily not to run out of majors too soon. A very creative person could add a twist to this process by creating original majors. A true student might avoid making a choice altogether and major in everything.

Of those techniques which appear to be more successful, we have: selecting a major because you enjoy studying that particular field, selecting a major because you enjoy the field and are good at it, selecting a major because you have known other people who worked in this area and it appealed to you, and of course the old standby of selecting a major because you have had a chance to explore other fields (through coursework or practical experience) and you feel that this is the kind of work that suits you best.

Some of you may be wishing that you had known about these techniques earlier, when you were choosing a major. Take heart, if your method wasn't mentioned here, you may want to share it with others for future reference. If you are skeptical about some of the techniques mentioned here, start asking other people how they selected their major. You may be surprised at some of their answers.

A string of six victories at the end of the season gave the team the most wins in their history (14-4-2), a fitting finish to a record setting campaign. The Rams closed out the 1983 campaign with a 2-1 triumph over Fordham in the Bronx, as they lost only one game in its last 11 outlings.

Winning five of its first six, URI moved into 19th place in the National rankings, and for most of the season were placed second or third in New England by the coaches' rating board. Among those victories was a 1-0 win over NCAA-bound Providence College.

A 12-0 drubbing of Fairfield tied the Ram record for most goals in a game, established by the same score versus Holy Cross in 1979. The team registered 10 shutouts, also a new mark, and finished with a record of points-per-game offensive average of 7.65.

Senior goalkeeper Scott Gillespie set two records: most shutouts in a single season (8.5) and best goals against average in a season (.76). He allowed only 13 goals in his 17 games and made an average 6.18 saves per contest. Senior team captain Barry Knapp set a record for the most games played in a career (71).

Juniors Tony Fontes and Gil Monteiro tied for the team scoring lead, each with 29 points. Fontes had a team high 12 goals plus 5 assists, while Monteiro scored 9 goals and topped the team in assists (11).

Geza Henni completed his 15th season as the head coach with a record of 159-69-24.

Although a club team by official status, the schedule comprised of schools boasting all varsity teams. Initially, with no pre-season, no scholarship athletes and very limited resources, the team was at a distinct disadvantage in this fine field of competitors losing its first four games by a total of eleven goals. They were outscored by their opponents 16-5.

From this point, despite being plagued by injuries and academic scheduling problems, the team rallied through hard work, determination and spirit exemplifying the finest attributes of athletic endeavor to win seven of its last nine games, finishing with a winning record of 7-6-0 on the year. They outscored their opponents 33-15.

This phenomenal performance included a berth in the finals of the RIWSA state championship at Providence College. After a halftime tie of 0-0, the team bowed 3-1 in the final minutes of the game.

Because of the successful efforts of all involved, the team has been elected to varsity status for the 1984 season and will compete as a NCAA Division III contender. The performance and leadership of seniors Kristine Powers, Joyce Gawron and Kristen Lomker will be sorely missed.

FIELD HOCKEY

After returning from a successful two week preseason tour of England, and under a new coach the WRam Field Hockey team posted a 4-10-2 record.

Coach Tracey Andrews used the speed of senior Tri-captain Linda Herron and junior Lynne Starses to quickly move the ball on to the Rhody attack, along with the precision passing of sophomore Roseanne Primavera and freshman Carl Guliia.

The defense was anchored by junior Tri-captains Deb Murphy and Andrea McGinn. Their sure stick turned away many opponents drives. Sophomore Jackie Molne held true at sweep, with junior Deb Robson having a banner year in goal.

The mid-field was controlled through the hustling efforts of seniors links Karen Murphy and Holly Kenyon, with freshman Sherry Shoemaker and junior Janet Boyle balancing out the defense at side backs.

The team is looking forward to the '84 season as it only loses two players to graduation. With experience under its belt the Rams' '84 campaign should prove to be successful.

Cross Country

Whether it be dodging the snakes of the Great Swamp, climbing Yawgoo, relaxing through "Paradise Pasture," or rolling over Wolf Rocks Road, the team, joined by Coach Copeland on his bike, was working together, lead by Tri-Captains Don Legere, Greg Hale and Joe Swift, to show that the 1983 Ram Harriers would once again make their mark on the New England level.

It was time to breed recent history. For the second year in a row, the team broke into the top Seven in the New England Championships, lead by an impressive third place finish by Greg Hale and a tenth place finish by a much improved Joe Swift. Contributing to this effort were the team's consistent three, four and five men: Don Legere, Mark Galloway, and Dale Boucher. Fine efforts were made from Bill King and freshman Chris Magee.

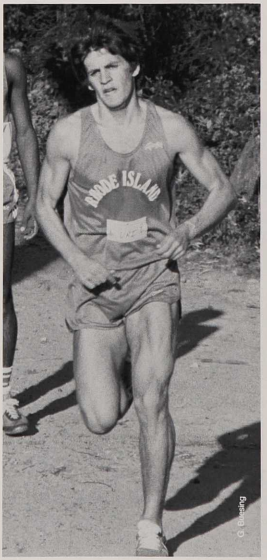

But it was not the mud and rain of Franklin Park that marked the end of the season for some. A ninth place finish in the ICAA Championship at Lehigh made Greg Hale the best URI finisher in 34 years. This finish qualified him to participate in the NCAA Championships, the first runner to do so since Bob Black, who won the NCAA in 1949.

Adding character to this years squad were Jim Scanlon, Paul Hanks, and Marty Susla, and of course the alumni whose presence were greatly appreciated.

With the exception of our only graduating senior, Bob Kostelak, we'll all be together again next year — bushwhacking the terrain of South County.

At first glance, disappointment may appear to have been what characterized the URI Rams 1983 season as the Yankee Conference title eluded them just as it appeared to be in sight. Mid-season heart-breaking losses to Boston University and the University of New Hampshire prevented the Rams from capturing the crown for the second time in the past three years.

A closer look will reveal a season much better than their 6-4 record indicates. The Rams became the first Yankee Conference team to defeat the University of Delaware since the Rams did back in 1967. Since then, Delaware had racked up 31 consecutive victories over Yankee Conference foes. Quarterback Dave Wienke, a first time starter as a senior, tied former Ram quarterback Steve Tosches' 1978 mark of 22 complete passes in one game.

The Governor's Cup was one title that did not elude the Rams as they defeated intrastate rival Brown University for the first time since 1978.

Wienke became the first quarterback in Ram history to throw for over 2000 yards in a single season as he threw for a total of 2,117 yards in 10 games. He also broke the URI total offensive record set in 1982 by Dave Grimsich, and the Yankee Conference single-season passing record, formerly held by Ken Sweitzer of Connecticut. To top it all off, Wienke's 150 completed passes were the most ever thrown by a Ram quarterback. The old mark was set by Larry Caswell in 1969.

Senior Jim Adams and Sophomore Dameon Reilly consistently made key catches while assisting Wienke in setting four marks. Each averaged 3.2 catches a game while racking up 1191 yards for the passing minded offense of coach Bob Griffin. Seniors Steve Caizzi and Dave Neill led the ground attack as they gained over 700 yards. Caizzi rushed for a total of seven touchdowns in ten games.

Defensively, the Rams were led by defensive back Tony Hill whose nine interceptions set a URI and a NCAA Division AA record. His most memorable one came on Homecoming Day against Northeastern University as he sprinted 94 yards for a touchdown that provided the stimulus for a Ram victory. The longest interception ever run back for a touchdown by an URI player was Bob DiSpirito's 74 yarder back in 1950 against Brown.

In the pits, Senior Mark Dennen led the Rams with 61 tackles. Senior Gerry Favreau and Junior Jeff Chenard sacked enemy quarterbacks a total of 16 times which cost opponents over 100 yards.

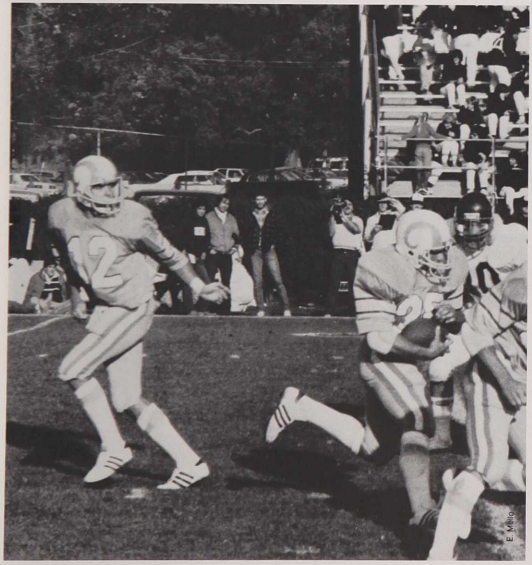

The Rams put on a clinic for area audiences as CBS Sports provided regional coverage of the Rams impressive 24-16 victory over the University of Maine.

This year Ram coach Bob Griffin was awarded with his fifth winning season in eight years at URI. With Wienke, Adams and Reilly, Griffin put together perhaps the best passing attack in the Yankee Conference this year.

Continued success for the Rams next year will depend on whether or not someone can be found to get the ball to receiving ace Dameon Reilly as consistently as Wienke did. Rich Kelly should provide the needed muscle to put the ball over the goal line in short yardage situations.

The WRAM Swimmers were again led by considerable talents of senior co-captain Sue James. She fittingly ended her last year here at Kingston by establishing her ninth individual school record in the final event she competed in at the New England Championships. In the four years she swam for the University, she scored over 300 points in championship competition, was the only swimmer to ever qualify for a national championship meet, and received the High Point Trophy for dual meet competition every year.

The swimming talents of freshman, walk-on, Michele Mulligan were also a tremendous asset to the team. Michele went on to prove that she was one of the top sprinters in our region by finishing third in the 50 yard Freestyle at the New Englands, and finaling in both the 100 yard and the 200 yard events. She, along with Sue, co-captain Kathy Cower ('85), Nadrah Zubi ('86), Sue Quintiliani ('86), and Grace Abbott ('86), gave us a strong Freestyle contingent.

Amy Colby ('85), for her third year, again proved that she is a great championship swimmer as she swam her way to three lifetime best times in the 100 yard and the 200 yard Breaststroke events, and in the Breaststroke leg of the 400 yard Medley Relay. She was a finalist in all of these events. Along with Karen Wunsch ('86), Rhode Island had another fine year in this stroke specialty.

The WRAM Swimmers received considerable backstroke help from freshman Maria Bednar, and diving help from Kery Griffin ('86) and Sheila Qunitiliani ('87). These three showed great promise while struggling with injuries and lack of experience.

The 1983-1984 season was not an easy one for The Swimmers. Our program is going through a re-building period when program goals are being re-evaluated and recruiting has become more selective. Losing only one athlete through graduation, and having a solid nucleus of returning veterans is going to provide the team with a great deal of continuity and base on which to build.

At the Fourth Annual Awards Banquet sponsored by the Fast Lane Club on April 28th, Sue James was awarded the Outstanding Swimmer Award and the High Point Trophy, and Lisa Billings was presented the Most Improved Swimmer Award.

The Men's Swimming Team completed one of their most successful seasons in its short twelve year history with their highest ever showing at the 65th New England Championships. Led by senior John Taffe who won three New England titles, the Rhody swimmers scored a record 265 points to place fourth out of the thirty teams competing. John won the 100 yard and the 200 yard breaststroke events, establishing new school marks in the process. With Dave Sullivan ('84), Don Duncan ('85), and Roger Schenone ('87), John also swam to a first place finish in the 400 yard Medley Relay; they established a new team record by over four seconds.

The men swam and dove to the finest dual meet season in four years with wins coming over the Universities of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Vermont. They also defeated two teams they lost close meets to in the 1982-1983 season, the University of Lowell and the Coast Guard Academy. During this part of the year the team set three new school records — something unusual in a sport where new standards are generally accomplished only at the end of the year.

Although the team's focus was once again going to be on the New England Championships, the men still went to the second Atlantic Ten Swimming and Diving Championships the week before looking to perform their best times of the year. Twenty-three seasonal best times were recorded, seventeen personal best times were set, and four more school records were established.

During the final weekend of the year at the New England Championships, the Rhode Island swimmers and divers continued to show improvement. Tim Fitzpatrick ('86) had an outstanding showing in the Individual Medley and Butterfly events. He swam to a second place finish in the 400 I.M. and a fifth place in the 200 yard event, to go along with a fifth place in the 200 Butterfly, Freshman Chip Church recorded two third place finishes in the 500 yard and the 1650 yard Freestyle, and the 200 yard I.M. Other swimmers and divers who scored points for the team at this meet were senior diver Dave Venerus (14th — 1 Meter Diving), and junior Kevin Salisbury (16th — 200 Butterfly).

At the fourth Annual Awards Banquet sponsored by the Fast Lane Club on April 28th, John Taffe was awarded the Outstanding Swimmer Award, and the High Point Trophy, and Kevin Salisbury was presented the Most Improved Swimmer Award.

The URI men's basketball team did not have a very successful season in terms of wins and losses, but something can be said for the endurance and stamina of the squad.

Led by seniors Kevin Compton, Roland Fiore, Marc Upshaw and Chris Cummings, the Rams astounded onlookers by winning the games in which they were predicted longshot losers, and by keeping the score close in the waning minutes of several other contests.

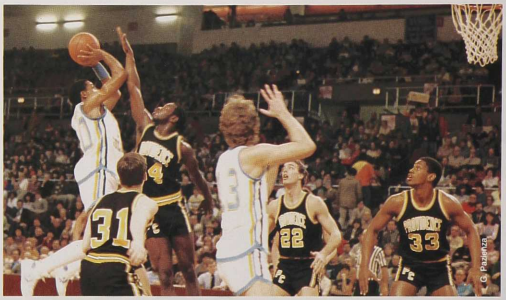

The Rams lost seven games by three points or fewer, two in overtime; three by one point, and three more by two points. All of the two-point defeats came on baskets by the opposition at the final buzzer.

Compton evolved as the offensive leader of the club, which completed its season with a 6-22 record. That established a new record for the most losses in a single season for a Ram club.

The "Cat" finished his career at URI averaging 11.5 points per game. He tallied a career high 26 points against St. Bonaventure University on January 7, 1984. That game sparked Compton, and in the five games following, he recorded 24, 18, 21, 12, and 13 points respectively, for a six-game ppg average of 19.0. He also averaged 33 minutes of playing time per game for the year.

Todd Bozeman was the overall team scoring leader with an 11.9 ppg average over the season, while accounting for 310 points. At the conclusion of the season, the Fast Break Club announced that Bozeman earned their Most Valuable Player Award. Bozeman shot a consistent 80 percent from the free throw line, and was credited with 28 steals and 94 rebounds during the 26 games in which he played.

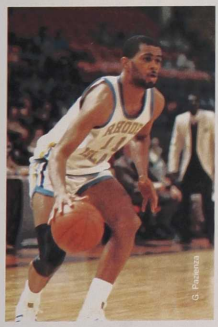

Upshaw returned to the court after nearly one year on the rehabilitation comeback trail from the knee injury he suffered last season. Although he missed seven games, Upshaw managed to tally 245 points to bring his career total to 1,363, which was good for nineteenth place on the All-Time URI list. He averaged 11.7 ppg, 6.2 rpg and scored 47 of 73 shots from the line.

Tony Taylor was the other player finishing with a scoring average in double figures. His 11.0 ppg was the result of his scoring 308 points. Taylor tallied a career high 28 points against West Virginia at the Providence Civic Center, in a game in which the Rams won, 98-84. He also was named the Defensive Player of the Year by the Fast Break Club.

Fiore, in his first season as a Ram, proved to be the biggest surprise for the club. His aggressive style of play, and his forceful attempts at rebound made for exciting games. He averaged 8.9 ppg, and was responsible for 137 rebounds and 26 steals. Fiore also totaled 116 personal fouls. He started all but one game for the Rams, and averaged 31 minutes of play per game.

Chris Scotti, a freshman, and Cummings shared the duties as the center. The two combined well, and both big men were relatively equal in points production, Scotti started 17 games, and led the team with 33 blocked shots, good for seventh in the Atlantic-10 Conference. As a first-year player, he appeared quite impressive against the more-seasoned veterans.

Another freshman to impress the Ram faithful onlookers was Tony Tucker, the 1982 High School Player of the Year in the state of Delaware. Tucker averaged 6.6 ppg while playing in all 28 games. He also was responsible for 48 turnovers and 11 blocked shot attempts. Tucker accounted for 18 points, his highest for the season, on the very first game of the year, against Canisius.

Paul Dudzinski played a limited role for the team, but did see some action in six games.

It was reported early in the season that Reggie Horne had left the University of Rhode Island, and its basketball program due to reasons not relating to the sport. He participated in seven games, four of which he started.

Coach Claude English did not have his contract renewed after three seasons as head coach. He did opt to complete the season at the helm. His record at Ram mentor was 25-58.

Sophomore returnee Rusty Cordua did not play at all, and neither did freshman Jesse Long. Cordua suffered a deep thigh bruise in pre-season practice, resulting in calcium deposits. Long severely sprained an ankle and subsequently underwent surgery to repair ligament damage.

BASKETBALL

Basketball

Just two seasons ago, the URI women's basketball team had trouble breaking even. They were satisfied with their 15-14 record, and thrilled with their Eastern Regional Tournament berth.

This season, however, the WRams were harder to please. Satisfaction to this club was repeating last year's 20-game win season and revenging the Rutgers Scarlet Knights in the Atlantic 10 Conference Championships.

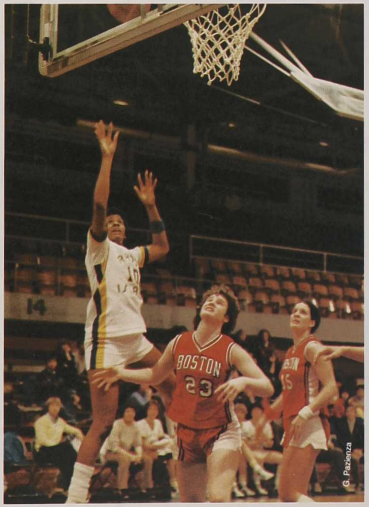

The 1983-84 WRams are satisfied, to say the least.

Although the team didn't quite reach their 20-win goal, an 18-12 overall slate certainly isn't shabby in the powerful ATC. Besides, their other goal was the more meaningful one. Just ask the Rutgers Scarlet Knights.

The fifth-seeded WRams mercilessly upset first-seeded Rutgers in the ATC championship, 81-70 (after upsetting Temple in the quarter-finals, 82-75). They finished second in the tournament, their highest finish in conference history, and laid the groundwork for a glowing WRam future.

Coach Nancy Langham and her assistants John Spiess (first year) and Bob Schneck, predicted a winning season last November. But what they built and witnessed in five months was a Cinderella story. Five WRam records were set throughout the season; the WRams 68-60 upset over Syracuse was their first over the Orange women in four outings; their 66-58 upset over the University of New Hampshire was a WRam first in seven outings (four seasons); and their come-from-behind Rutgers victory was an ultimate WRam first.

Basketball

Although the squad jumped to a 6-3 1983 record, the new year triggered a demoralizing five-game WRam losing streak. Similar to past seasons, mid-January was colder than ever for the 6-8 Rhody. But starting with a 73-65 Boston University burn, the WRams snapped out of their mid-winter slump and proceeded to pocket eleven out of their next 13 games. The victims included a stunned University of New Hampshire squad, Seton Hall, ATC powerhouse West Virginia, Connecticut, Fairfield, Montclair, UMass, Maine, Temple, and Rutgers. Unfortunately, the WRams seven-game February fury ended in the ATC Championship finals. Penn State beat Rhody 99-64 and moved on to National Competition.

But the WRam hoopsters are right where they want to be — among the supremacy of Eastern College women's basketball. And thanks to the leadership, talent, and desire of four seniors, and especially two year co-captains Carol Smith and Helene Roher, the young 1984-1985 WRams will be heading in the right direction.

Smith leaves URI after becoming the second highest scorer in WRam Hoopster history, with 1,341 points and holding five all-time records for steals and assists. Roher, who's experience and leadership guided the squad, ends her career with 890 points and 708 rebounds.

Although the club loses starters Smith, Roher, point-guard Maureen Hogan, and reserve center Barbara Miltner, assistant coach spies have completed perhaps the most promising hoopster recruiting year in WRam history. With the club's already-solid Washington-Quantmeyer-Hathaway-Ryan base, 1984-1985 could very well be the year of the WRam in Kingston.

Contentment next season won't be 20-wins, or a Syracuse and Rutgers upset. Satisfaction in 1984-1985 will mean revenging the Penn State Lady Lions, capturing the Atlantic 10 Conference Championships, and chatting with Cheryl Miller and company in the lobby of the national tournament headquarters.

VOLLEYBALL

They almost did it in 1983. URI's women volleyballers came as close as they have ever been to breaking down the door separating the WRAMS from National prominence. If not for a lapse in the Atlantic 10 Conference Championships, the hinges on that door may have given way.

Disappointment over that lapse, however, can't take anything away from the team's tremendous accomplishments.

The WRams, under coach Bob Schneck, started kicking and clawing when another team may have given up to turn a mediocre start into the best overall record in the team's history, 29-15. URI was 26-23 a year before.

After a 7-8 early-season mark, the spikers caught fire, winning 20 of their last 24 regular-season matches. Included in that surge was a string of 10 consecutive victories. The late season explosion seemed to point the way to a strong showing in the ATC's.

Rhody did start well in the conference championships, sweeping past West Virginia, 15-6, 15-12, 15-5. But eventual winner Penn State treated the WRams in a similar manner, disposing of the upstart Rhody spikers in three, 15-11, 15-6, 15-6.

From there, URI took another step backward, falling 12-15, 15-5, 10-15, 11-15 to Temple and 15-13, 3-15, 13-15, 15-17 to Rutgers. A win over George Washington, 15-13, 15-7, 15-10 gave the WRams third place in the tournament behind Penn State and Rutgers. URI sophomore Sue Scott was named to the all-ATC tournament team for the second straight year for her role in the WRam effort.

For the regular season, Scott placed third in the ATC in both hitting efficiency (.319) and kills per game (4.1) while ending up seventh in the conference in aces per game (.575).

Junior Ginny O'Brien and sophomore Nancy MacDonald were also ranked among the top-10 in the ATC in three categories. O'Brien was third in aces per game (.624), sixth in hitting efficiency (.274) and ninth in kills per game (2.88).

MacDonald was fourth in the blocks per game category with an average of 1.8, while posting a No. 6 ranking in aces per game (581) and placing seventh, behind O'Brien, in hitting efficiency at .259.

Other WRams earning a spot in the ATC's top-10 were sophomore Dee Dee Hull and junior Nancy Nydam in the assists per game category and sophomore Diane Garceau for blocks per game.

Hull was second in assists with a 10.4 average. Nydam averaged 1.3 assists each time out, good for sixth. Garceau's 1.27 blocks per game put her at sixth in the ATC.

With one exception it was a perfect season for the URI hockey club team. They were reigning champions of the New England Small College Hockey Association and they were out to prove they could do it again. And they almost did.

Led by coach Tom Macari, they had roared thorugh not only their own league to finish with a 9-1-2 NESCHA record to clinch the divison title with one game remaining in the regular season, but they also dominated most of their non-league competition to finish with a 13-4-2 overall season record.

Rhody opened the season on a winning note with a 8-3 victory over the Stoneybrook College. Later in the season they destroyed Brandeis University 15-0, Clark 9-0, Central Connecticut State University 15-1, Wagner College 10-2, and other various assorted teams.

Then it was on to the play-offs. Their first victim was Worcester Polytechnic Institute. The Rams showed no mercy as they blasted WPI 8-2. The Community College of Rhode Island was out for blood the following night, though, as it proved too much for the Rams, as they edged Rhody 5-4.

Sparking the Rams in their winning efforts were Dave Cloxton and Jim Allenson. Cloxton, who was voted the team's Most Valuable Player by his peers and the coaches, led the team, in overall scoring with 18 goals and 31 assists for a total of 49 points. Allenson received the top Scorer award for the NESCHA for his 15 goals and 11 assists for 26 points in league play.

Backing Cloxton and Allenson's efforts on the offense were Tony Perna (14-13-27), Norm LaFleur (4-9-13); John Shola; Art Floru (8-11-19); Phil Hadfield (4-11-15), who won the Most Exciting Player award; Bob McLeod (6-9-15), who was named the team's Most Inspirational Player; John Howard (3-8-11); and Art Gow (1-1-2).

Providing a superb effort in front of goalies Scott MacBeth and Ernie DelGizzo (0-2-2) were defensemen Dave Colson (2-6-8), who was named the squad's Unsung Hero; Steve Peltier (7-16-23); Dave Foster (0-5-5); Paul Rasieleski (0-5-5); Anthony Hamel (7-6-13); and Roger Briggs (3-4-7), who was awarded the Most Improved Player.

The season may not have ended quite the way the Rams had hoped for, but they left the lockerroom after the league finals with their heads held high and maybe just a little more determination in their eyes. There's always next year.

Hit hard by last year's graduation, the URI Men's Lacrosse team recruited very heavily this year, resulting in a very young and inexperienced squad. Looking to rebuild the team, first year coach John Hooper faced many hurdles as poor weather delayed the seasons opening, and a rash of injuries depleted the squad.

The season opener against Boston University proved to be an indication of the Ram's fate for the season, as the Terriers prevailed in a nail-biting, overtime win. With two more one-goal losses, followed by a couple of tough defeats, Hooper restructured his team and brought URI back to basics. The Rams responded by winning their last four games out of seven, and provided the consistency that was not evident in the beginning of the spring season.

In its first victory of the young season, the Rams tripped the University of Connecticut 8-7. Holding off a late rally by the Huskies, URI's defense tightened itself and forced UCONN to turn the ball over to the Rams. A hard-fought victory over a strong Southern Connecticut State University team (10-8) gave URI the revenge it seeked from an earlier overtime loss to Southern. The season closed with a pair of ruthless victories over State rival, Bryant College, 17-3 and 15-1. These victories signified the young Rams' comeback and at the same time pointed the Laxmen in the direction of a strong season for 1985. Consistent performers for the team were attackmen Barrows, Slack, Weiss and Unsworth; midfielders Smith, Baker, Nelson and Finn: defensemen Mahoney, Hannifin and Willis: goalies Lerner and Rocchio.

Editor Note: The RENAISSANCE regrets that there were no WRams softball pictures available for use in the 1984 book.

It all ended rather unceremoniously, with a double shutout over the Lady Friars of Providence College. No big deal. As they say, "Not with a bang, . . ."

Sadly, the WRams of the URI softball team (21-11) never fulfilled their dreams of making it back to the NCAA Championships without a time-tested, veteran squad. And, after having seemed on a collision course with that end, the reality of seeing the chance disintegrate wasn't a pleasant thing.

The season began with a fairly successful road trip to South Carolina. The WRams snared five of seven games during the visit.

Then came the onset of the "splitsies." The WRams split a doubleheader with Central Connecticut, then another twin bill with Sacred Heart and (after a 2-1 win over Miami of Ohio) a pair of games with arch rival Rutgers, the team which eventually took it all in the Atlantic 10 Conference.

URI sandwiched another split with Springfield between a 7-0, 10-0 bombardment of Bridgeport and a 3-1, 9-6 sweep past St. John's. But things still didn't look half bad heading into the important portion of the season.

That final thrust began on a sour note, with a newly-ascended Eastern powerhouse Adelphi squeaking out of a 1-0 win over the WRams. C. W. Post fell to URI by the same score later that day.

A no-sweat, seventh-straight RIAIAW state title was tainted somewhat by the announcement that coach Nancy Langham would not be at the helm next season. Langham, will instead, focus her complete attention on the women's basketball program. Yet the WRams had to put that bit of information aside and continue toward their goal. Ahead, was the most important weekend of the year, with six ATC contests in a three-day bonanza. At stake was the bid to the ATC Championships that the team so desperately wanted. It would be, they had hoped, the next step on their way to the NCAA's. URI needed to take at least one game of the two at the University of Massachusetts to qualify for that bid. UMass quickly backed the WRams up against the wall with a 9-1 first-game clobbering. Then came an extra-inning nail biter — with the URI season hanging on every pitch. The contest was deadlocked at zero when UMass went to work in the eighth. And with two out and two on, it happened. An unearned run effectively ended the WRams' season. What they had worked so hard for had vanished. But their heads were not hanging. They had come this far and they weren't going to quit. It was time to show the kind of character built into the team. And that the WRams did.

A 1-0 loss to Temple the next day stung a bit more. Still no surrender on the WRam's part. They turned on Temple in the second game to walk away with a 6-1 win and a split.

Again the next day, URI fell far behind quickly against Penn State before exploding for an 11-8 win. The Lady Lions, however, were not about to let themselves get beat twice. The WRams fell in the second game, 7-2.

The season officially closed with a sweep (3-0, 4-0) over P.C. Overall, URI had six hitters at the .290-plus plateau. Tracy Turner led the way at .337 (11 RBI) followed by Deb Pereira at .310 (17 RBI), Lori Whidden at .295 (4 RBI), Maggie Smith (4 RBI), Brenda Weaver (10 RBI), and Maureen Hogan (11 RBI), all at .293.

As a team, the WRams batted .278, 54 points higher than their opposition. The .278 average represents a jump of 41 points over the team's batting average last season.

The 1984 team set 49 and tied seven team and individual records, continuing its spectacular move up the baseball ladder, after having established 43 similar marks in 1983. The 1984 records included most games played (40), hits (361), runs (257), extra-base hits (103), doubles (58), homers (38), and team batting average (.285). URI qualified for post season play for the first time in its 75 seasons, finishing second in the eastern division and playing in the championship versus defending titlist Temple. Unfortunately, they lost that contest to the Owls 6-3, 6-4. URI went into that final needing only one win to advance to the NCAA's.

Among individual accomplishments, junior catcher Dave Haring set five records for hitters, including back-to-back grand-slam homers vs. Kentucky Wesleyan and a new single-game mark for RBI's (8). Later, Haring whacked back-to-back three-run homers vs. UMass and ended up the season with marks of 52 hits, 34 RBI's, 154 at bats, and a total of 79 bases. His overall batting average was .338.

Senior tri-captain and outfielder Steve Godwin established three records enroute to the second best career hitting averages in history (.330). He holds marks for career runs (74), and season (12), and career stolen bases (22).

BASEBALL

Sophomore DH Tony Hill had the highest batting average (.411) in a season for a player with the most at bats under 100 (39/95). He also established a new season's slugging percentage record (.674).

Senior tri-captain and pitcher Tom Messier set seven new records and tied another, enroute to a 6-4 record. He established game (16), season (84), and career (167) strikeout marks, set a new record for wins in a season (6) and tied the career mark for victories (13). He also opened the 1984 campaign with a 7-inning no-hitter against Murray State, only the fourth no-hit game in the Ram diamond history.

John Norris completed his 15th season as head coach with his best spring ever (22-18), most wins in a single season, first time in the post-season playoffs, and a career record of 171-241-2. The only other baseball coach at Kingston with more victories is the late Frank Keaney who coached 19 seasons (177-71-1).

Seniors

Thinking back on the past four years, I find it difficult to believe how quickly the time has passed. Just the other day my parents helped me move into Bressler Hall where I placed my high school yearbook on the shelf, took a step back and a deep breath and my college years began . . .

It seemed each time I returned home for a weekend or a vacation, I was so much more "brilliant" and prepared for "the real world." I could not wait to drill my parents in History or Chemistry to show them how much I had learned in such a short time. The truth of the matter, was I was trying to impress them and convince myself that I was capable of retaining this wealth of knowledge.

I feel as though I have changed a great deal since those "dorm-life days." I have made many friends and memories that will linger on throughout the years. I am certainly older now and hopefully wiser in my decision making processes.

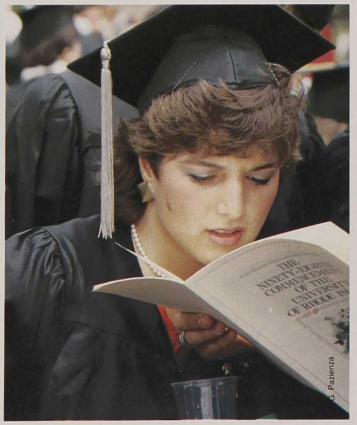

The University of Rhode Island has been more than the college I attended. It was a place to stumble, to fall, get back up again, and walk on. My education at U.R.I. has afforded me invaluable experiences and has taught me many lessons. I have been exposed to countless academic and social situations which hopefully will prepare me for what lies ahead.

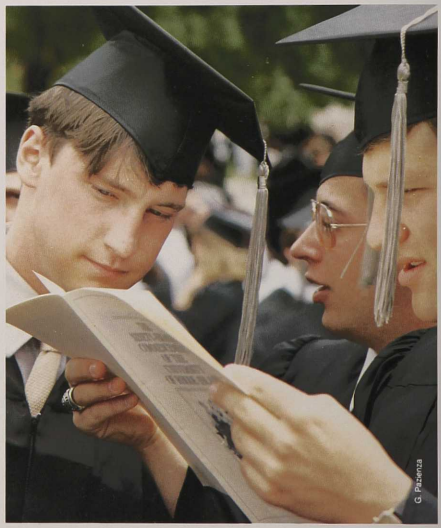

When leaving U.R.I., the most important attribute which we should possess is the desire to learn. When one door closes, another opens. The door has closed on our collegiate life, but the door to our future has just begun to open. Beyond this door lies more knowledge and experiences than we can imagine. It is imperative that we anticipate, await and accept them with enthusiasm and optimism. Our quest for knowledge and thirst for continuous growth are a large part of what makes us so special and unique.

Each one of us has his own goals and career objectives, however, the one common denominator we share, is our four years at the University of Rhode Island. Let's remember U.R.I. as the beginning of our education not the ending!

Dear Mom and Dad . . .

Freshman Year ▶

URI is great. I've met so many new people. It snowed here all day yesterday, and last night some students got out of hand. They "bombed" a few police cars with snowballs and proceeded to attack the campus police station. What a mess! The football games are a lot of fun, especially when I follow the game. The fraternity parties we've been going to on the weekends have been fantastic. The dining hall food isn't as bad as everyone warned me it would be. You can't beat the burgers, fries and ice cream they serve at Hope Dining Hall. Don't worry though, I'll watch my weight! I've learned so much in the short time I've been away. I feel like a new person!

— See you soon —
Mary

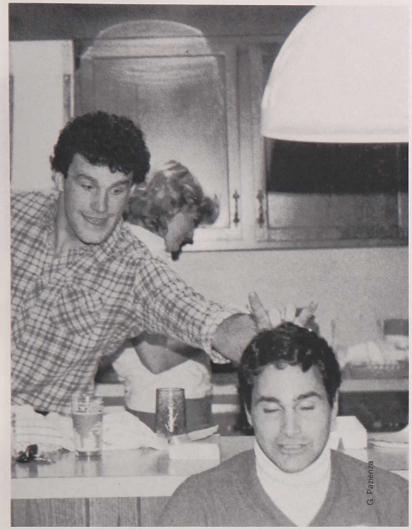

Sophomore Year ▶

Living on the fourth floor in Browning Hall has been quite an experience. Now that it's Spring Semester, the music never stops and the frisbees are flying! Spring Weekend is coming up, and Squeeze is one of the bands who will be performing. I'm sure they'll be as great as James Taylor was in February. I still can't believe I waited in line for J.T. tickets from 4 am to 10 am. (I snuck into the Union through the Pub door!) It was worth the wait, though.

I've been watching my weight like I promised, but I just can't seem to shake that 10 pounds from freshman year. I've discovered a new place to eat since I realized how bad the dining hall food really is. It's a place called the "Rams Den." The food is pretty decent and the prices aren't bad either. I guess I'll survive after all!

Miss you,
Mary

◀ Junior Year

I can't thank you enough for letting me move off campus and into this beautiful beach house. We haven't heard from the monsters, I mean landlords for a long time, but the less they know the better. If you get the chance, can you send my monthly allowance a little sooner? I've been spending time in the Ram's Den between classes (of course), and those coffees sure do add up. My friends and I have discovered that the prices really aren't that low, so we've found a new place called "Del-Mor's." Hopefully their Italian food won't affect my weight, which is leveling off, by the way!

If it's any comfort, Referendum number 8 was passed, so URI is in a little better shape, and I thought I'd try to do my part. If I don't hear from you, I'll assume the check got lost in the mail.

Your daughter,
Mary

◀ Senior Year

It's hard to believe four years have gone by already! URI has been a fantastic experience, and I can't begin to thank you for your endless compassion and understanding. I only wish the university had a special diploma for the graduate's parents.

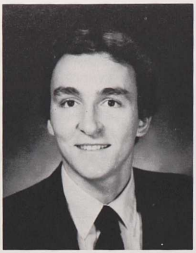

I have so many memories which I will keep with me and look back on. The way the campus looks in the fall when the leaves change, the football games, fraternity parties, the dorms and my "commuter" days. But most importantly, I'll remember the people who picked me up when I fell down, patted me on the back when I succeeded, and cheered me on when I needed confidence. It's been great.

I love you —
Mary

It seems only a short while ago
That we walked up that long road
May a bit excited
To see someone — or do something
And wondering about the future.

Now here we are
At the end of that long road.
It seems we have come too soon
I feel as if I'm in the middle
Wanting to see new things
But wanting to stay, too.

But we all must go
Our time is up together
I won't forget the friends I've made
And all the things we've done.
For we are all unique
As individuals and also together.

So here's to being friends
May it continue as we change
Let's hope we've learned from each other
The true meaning of friendship.
Take care my friends, till we meet again.

In Closing . . .

G. Pazienza

There were times when I thought this year would never end. But looking over the months spent in the Renaissance office, I can see how quickly it all went. Of course there were all too many late nights spent laying out the pages, coordinating photos and the chaotic rush of deadline pressure — but the end justified the means.

As yearbook staffers, there probably isn't a one of us who could forget the pizza and beer parties in the pub, nor the crazy times spent joking in the office. We even had our own "Springtime Flood" when a water main on the second floor broke and water gushed through our ceiling. The staff and publisher had to scurry around with umbrellas trying to save our layouts and pictures from disaster. But we persevered and were able to produce the highlights of 1984 in this book.

Our theme was "The Possibilities Are Endless." In these 320 pages, we tried to capture those four years spent at U.R.I. These pages contain the happy times, the wild and crazy times and maybe just a few sad times.

But before going on, It's important to note that this book could not have been produced without a very strong-willed and determined group of people, and fortunately we had that here. We were able to face and overcome many setbacks, including late deadlines, Spring Break photos which finally surfaced in July and relative inexperience on a project this immense.

As Editor in Chief of Renaissance, I wish to thank all of those people who helped to make this years book a possibility.

First I wish to thank Colleen the Associate Editor for the tremendous help you gave in setting up the staff and your time spent on laying out the book. You were always ready with the aspirin during our deadline rushes.

Art, you are a mathematical wizard with your ability to keep our finances straight and even helping to add more color to the yearbook. As Business Manager, you went above the call of duty in helping with each department. Thanks for a shoulder to lean on and those encouraging words during those long days spent working on the book.

Colby, you took over the role of Sports Editor several months into the year and did it all in stride. Thank you for all your hard work and dedication throughout the year.

Senior Editors Amy and Joann, my thanks for all your toils in coordinating the senior section. You both deserve awards for your patience and hard work.

Thank you Marsha for taking over the Activities section mid-year and for teaching the rest of us how to do layouts.

Chris and Karen, as Copy-Editors you made sure no errors slipped by. Karen you really picked up the slack with your typing and layout work. Chris, besides your sharp editing skills you also made sure we had plenty of pictures of you around the office.

Gary you deserve thanks for your work as Photo Editor. You made sure we always had enough photos available for the book and then some. No one managed to escape your quick snapshots, perhaps you should try landing a job on "Candid Camera."

To Assistant Editors, Michelle and Leslie, thank you for your time and great amount of help in putting this yearbook together.

Thank you Karen Devitt of Taylor Publishing Company for spending countless hours with the staff helping out in every aspect of the book. Without your endless patience and expertise this yearbook may not have been a reality.

John DeWaele of T.D. Brown, thank you for all the time you spent helping out the staff and for your many photo contributions. You always made yourself available to us when we needed your assistance.

To Pat Nielson, graduate assistant, my thanks for your help in producing the book and for your managerial skills. Your quick sense of humor helped carry us through the year.

Bruce Hamilton, Yearbook Advisor, thank you for the support throughout the year and into the summer months. Also thanks for the shoulder to cry on. By the way . . . don't forget about the celebration!

Thanks are in order for all the people that helped make this yearbook complete. They include contributing writers and photographers, the Student Senate Office, Mel Murphy, Mrs. Nye in accounting, Norm Windus, Lauri Pietruszka and The Good 5¢ Cigar.

To friends who have helped me throughout the year as Editor in Chief, especially Jenny, thank you.

I'd like to add a special thanks to my parents for always standing by me with unending support through these college years.

To put an end to this awards ceremony, I would like to wish the best of luck to all the 1984 graduates — this book is dedicated to you.

Best of luck to next years staff, I hope you have as much fun working on the yearbook as I have. And don't forget . . . "The Possibilities Are Endless!"

When you were freshmen and sophomores you thought college would never end. How many times would you have to walk through the slush and mud on the Quad at 8:00 in the morning? Would those lines in the bookstore ever end? And when, if ever, would you finally finish studying and get some sleep. You would sit at your desk studying while at the same time mumbling to yourself "So these are the best years of my life!"

When you became juniors, you began to realize that four years can go by very quickly. The mud became more bearable, the lines became shorter, and you did get to bed.

As seniors, you have reached the end of your undergraduate career, and you can no longer count on next year. You are finally ready to confront what you've been hearing about all your life — the dreaded "Real World." Remember that expression? When you were in high school, you heard "Wait until college!" Now that you are in college it's "Wait until you meet the real world!" It's as if everything you've ever done before graduation doesn't count, and life begins after college — for real this time.

Well, contrary to what you might have heard, four years of college teaches many things — friendship, teamwork, patience and intellectual understanding. But probably the most important lesson learned has been perseverance. This determination of the human spirit is different in everyone, but it exists just the same. It is a strength of mind which says anything can be achieved if it can be imagined. Let's face it, if you can make it to Chafee in a hail storm, you can certainly get a job! An exaggeration, maybe, but you go about the two the same way — with your head down, always moving forward.

In short, perseverance which guided you through those countless registration lines will also guide you through the rest of your life. There will always be rough times, but they only serve to make the good times better. After all, a situation is only as bad or good as you want it to be. Remember, you have the perseverance because you graduated from URI dammit!
